Tension Underlies Cuba Celebration

Could Erupt Into Serious Situation

HAVANA (AP) — The capture of one of Fidel Castro's most wanted enemies was announced Saturday night as thousands of young Cuban farmers, waving banners and brandishing sharp sugarcane knives roamed this capital. They were in a mood for a celebration—or trouble.

Police said Rafael del Pino, leader of the "White Rose" organization, who has been operating from Miami, Fla., was wounded and captured 20 miles east of here while apparently trying to fly a group of Cubans out of the country.

The "White Rose" leader apparently flew a chartered single-engined plane from Florida and landed on a paved highway for a dawn rendezvous with his associates here.

Heavily armed police, led by Chief Efigenio Amijeiras, machinegunned the plane as it landed, setting it afire and wounding the pilot. A carload of would-be passengers escaped after exchanging shots with the police. Police said they dragged Del Pino from the plane and that he was in a grave condition—with burns—in a military hospital.

Earlier police announced the arrest of four other White Rose members and the seizure of documents and ammunition of the 26th of July movement which overthrew the dictatorship of Fulgencio Batista last January.

Del Pino, 32, complained on May 30 he had been attacked at Miami Beach by a gang that he called "Fidel Castro Police."

He was charged in 1951 by U.S. authorities with trying to smuggle arms to anti-Batista forces, but now opposes Castro's regime

Dorticos assured the Cuban people that Castro could not for long resist the mounting pressure they have put on him to return to the post of Premier.

St. Louis County's New TV Tower Starts Operating

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A new 1,049-foot tower and transmitting facilities for television station KTVI will go into operation Sunday morning, replacing one blown down by the Feb. 10 tornado.

The new $500,000 tower is located in southwest St. Louis County just west of Grant's Farm. KTVI, which has its studios in the city at 5915 Berthold Avenue, had already started work on the new tower and transmitting station when the tornado wrecked the 577-foot tower adjoining the studios. A temporary extension was installed.

J. J. Bernard, vice president and general manager, said KTVI now will be able to use its full 100,000-watt transmitter to serve a wider area. He said set owners with proper antenna equipment should get a clear picture within a 84-mile radius.

Report Lloyd Urging Allies Agree Quickly To Summit Meeting

GENEVA (AP) — Britain was authoritatively reported Saturday night to be urging her allies to agree quickly to join the Soviet Union in early summit talks.

The view of Britain's Selwyn Lloyd is understood to be that the Big Four already have moved near enough toward a Berlin truce to justify the calling of a top level conference.

Western Troops Stay In W. Berlin, Herter Declares

BERLIN (AP) — Secretary of State Christian A. Herter declared Saturday Western troops are indispensable to West Berlin freedom and will remain here. He also declared the West never will accept any Soviet deadline for a settlement of the Berlin problem in the foreign ministers negotiations in Geneva.

Herter flew here for a visit during a day off in the Geneva conference and dedicated a street named for his predecessor, the late John Foster Dulles. The visit was aimed at bucking up the morale of West Berlin's 2¼-million citizens, who have begun to worry about what is going to happen in the Geneva negotiations that have been dragging on for eight weeks.

In a ceremony of signing the golden visitors' book at West Berlin City Hall Herter said: "I know that the people of West Berlin regard our troops, and those of France and the United Kingdom, as defenders of their freedom. I know that the presence of these troops, which will be preserved, is indispensable to the continuance of that freedom."

Declaring that Western rights in Berlin cannot be terminated by action of the Soviet Union alone, Herter added that "we have not accepted and will not accept any deadline on them."

But his American, French and West German colleagues at the foreign ministers' conference do not see eye to eye with him. As a result all will press ahead with more slow, grim, hard bargaining with Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union in the next few days.

Some highly placed Western informants said that not only does the United States not go along with Lloyd's proposed new strategy at this time, but it has no intention of agreeing to such a deal in order to get a summit conference.

U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter is reported determined to obtain from the Russians a firm agreement to protect the allied position in Berlin and access to it until Germany is unified or some change is agreed on by all the Big Four powers.

Lloyd's position became known as the two-month-old conference here faced a week of crucial decisions. It is clear the negotiators must make up their minds in a matter of days whether to set the time, place and work-program for a summit meeting or to suggest some other form of continuing negotiations.

This weekend Lloyd is back in London conferring with Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, who thought up the idea of a long series of East-West summit conferences stretching over the years ahead. Both take the position now that "the sooner the summit the better."

With this Geneva conference approaching its climax it would surprise nobody if Macmillan picked up the telephone and told Presi-

Socialite Gay Hart Starts Home As FBI Verifies Story Of Kidnaping Was Hoax

CHICAGO (AP) — Blonde Gay Hart, 21, started home to New Jersey Saturday as the FBI disclosed it had verified that her story of being kidnaped was a hoax. She came to Chicago alone by bus under emotional tension over her impending wedding, the FBI said.

Richard D. Auerbach, FBI chief in Chicago, told newsmen that the young woman rented a hotel room in Chicago and listened to news reports about her possible kidnaping.

He said that after attending five movies Thursday, "in a panic, and not quite realizing what she was doing, and being all confused, she took a cab out into the park.

"She walked for a while and then hailed the first police car she saw."

Then followed her story of a cross-country terror ride as the prisoner of two kidnapers, which she later recanted.

The FBI man said details of the situation were turned over to the U.S. attorney's office for possible prosecution.

But, Mitchell S. Rieger, chief assistant U.S. attorney, declined to prosecute her for giving false information about a kidnaping "in view of her current and previous general mental and physical condition."

Miss Hart was shepherded out of the 15th-floor hotel suite where she had rested under a physician's care. Her fiance, 25-year-old Stanley Gaines, walked her to a freight elevator with his arm around her waist. He told newsmen, "We're going to be married."

At the freight elevator, Gay's father, Ralph Hart, and two burly hotel detectives scuffled with the reporters, preventing them from boarding the cage. Hart, his daughter and Gaines left the hotel.

Miss Hart disappeared from Newark Tuesday night after seeing Gaines off on a flight to Pittsburgh. She turned up in Chicago early Friday morning, and told police and federal agents the hoax story of two harrowing days as the victim of two kidnapers.

Hurricane Damage Heavy, Rains Bring Threat Of Floods

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Continuing downpours, on the heels of rains up to 15 inches, raised a specter of floods Saturday night in the wake of Hurricane Debra.

Loose estimates placed damage in the millions from the tropical blow, which started breaking up late in the day after smacking into the Texas coast with winds as high as 105 m.p.h.

Forecasters warned of further heavy rains and squalls spreading northward into east Texas and extreme western Louisiana. A Weather Bureau advisory said local amounts of 10 to 15 inches were likely Saturday night and Sunday.

"All interests in that area should watch for possible flood warnings from local Weather Bureau offices," the advisory cautioned.

Debra, little more than a day and a half old, lost hurricane force by midafternoon. Contradicting earlier predictions she would wane fast after hitting the mainland, the season's fourth tropical storm nevertheless maintained winds of hurricane strength for nearly 100 miles inland.

The heaviest rain — 15 inches measured by a farm gauge—fell in Brazoria County, just west of Galveston.

By mid-afternoon when the center of the storm reached Cleveland, north of Houston, the highest winds dropped to 65 miles an hour, rain was falling in the "eye," and the U.S. Weather Bureau said Debra could no longer be considered a hurricane.

The hurricane winds, torrential downpours and six-foot tides accompanying Debra sent thousands of residents scurrying from their homes along the coast to schools, courthouses and other public buildings Friday night.

Coast Guard and sheriff's officers sought seven persons reported missing in the storm-swept area between Galveston and Brazoria County. Four were unrepoted since heading for Galveston Island in a cabin cuiser Thursday.

There were no reported deaths. A fishing boat captain was injured at Freeport, where 15-foot waves smashed his craft against a rock jetty.

Damage was expected to run into the millions.

At Freeport, Chief of Police Barney Priest estimated the hurricane damage at one million dollars. Preliminary checks at Texas City, where a number of business buildings and residences were smashed by the hurricane, indicated damage running into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. In Brazoria County, damage to crops alone was placed in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The highest wind velocity was 105 m.p.h. at Brazoria when the hurricane hit with full force during the early morning hours.

Rains up to 15 inches fell in Brazoria County. More than 10 inches flooded streets and low-lying areas of Orange on the eastern edge of the hurricane's path. Houston had nearly 5 inches. Steady rains continued Saturday in the storm area and ahead of the hurricane.

78-YEAR-OLD MAN LOSES LIFE SAVINGS, $35,000

CHICAGO (AP)—A 78-year-old city employe told police Saturday he lost a wallet containing $35,000, his entire life savings, three days ago.

Leroy Hunter, a sidewalk inspector, said he lost the money Wednesday while working on the South Side and searched for it for three days to no avail.

Hunter said he always carried his savings, accumulated since 1932, because he doesn't trust banks.

Stratton Winds Up Action On Bills; Signs Total Of 1,136

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. William G. Stratton Saturday completed the job of acting on the 1,357 bills passed at the 1959 session of the Illinois Legislature.

The governor disposed of the bulk of them — about 900 — during the past two weeks.

In all, Stratton signed 1,136 bills, vetoed 216 in full and 5 in part.

Among his last actions, he vetoed measures to remove the authority of county boards to license motels and transient lodgings, and to bring employes of state universities under the Unemployment Compensation Act.

Stratton said the means of financing the benefits for university employes was not included in his budget and in addition the bill discriminated against other state employes not included in jobless payments.

He signed a series of bills making changes in various public pension systems.

Other bills vetoed included those which called for:

Permitting the Cook County Board to license entertainment in unincorporated areas, with power to prohibit obscene theatricals and other exhibitions.

Giving "quick taking" power to the Chicago Sanitary District to acquire land under eminent domain procedure where it was needed for constructing sewers and drainage structures.

Permitting use of motor fuel tax funds for replacement of trees removed during street widening.

Reducing from 25 to 6 the membership of the Illinois Toll Highway Advisory Committee.

Defining and prohibiting unfair business competition.

Permitting absentee voting by persons who cannot be at the polls because of observance of a religious holiday.

Clashes Disrupt Start Of World Youth Festival

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Tension mounted here Saturday on the eve of the Communist-sponsored seventh world youth festival after clashes between participants and anti-Communists.

The sponsors of the 10-day event had appeared to be inviting trouble when they decided to hold the festival outside the Iron Curtain for the first time — and trouble they were getting.

Austrian anti-Communist youths vowed that, if Austria's neutral government would not ban the festival, they would unmask "this Communist monster propaganda show."

Fistfights occurred when anti-Communists distributed leaflets among new arrivals. At least one youth required medical treatment for a scalp wound after being jumped by Austrian Communists Friday night. Police broke up the row and made some arrests.

The official opening of the "peace, friendship and coexistence" show will be held in the Vienna soccer stadium Sunday afternoon, with parades, speeches and fireworks.

About a third of the U.S. festival participants, the 88-member "Chicago Group" arrived here by chartered plane early Saturday morning and immediately had difficulties with the "United States Festival Committee" of New York which had gone out to the airport to greet them.

Most of the Americans refused to register for the festival on the official forms issued to them by the New York committee, which they claim are liable to be exploited by Moscow. After hours of argument, the "Chicago group" finally registered and crossed out the official heading "United States Festival Delegation."

Nixon, Khrushchev Talk Of Peace, Ike At Dinner

Hostility Shifts To Friendliness

MOSCOW (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Premier Nikita Khrushchev met at a U. S. Embassy dinner Saturday night and talked of peace and President Eisenhower.

Toasting the American President's health, Khrushchev told Nixon: "I, like all my colleagues, like your president.

"We like his sincerity, his gentlemanship, which is quite up to the mark."

The atmosphere at the dinner, the fifth meeting between Nixon and Khrushchev in less than three days, was described as "one of cordiality throughout." Newsmen were barred from the dinner but the exchange of toasts and other details were reported later by American spokesmen.

There was no word whether Nixon and Khrushchev discussed at the dinner the vice president's surprise decision to fly to Poland for a two-day good-will visit after his Soviet tour ends.

Khrushchev told the dinner guests the Soviet Union has never had a disagreement with Eisenhower and recalled that the U.S. President worked with the Soviets during World War II.

Nixon, in toasting the health of Soviet President Klementi Voroshilov, who did not attend the dinner, compared Khrushchev and Eisenhower in these words: "Mr. Khrushchev and Mr. Eisenhower are alike in one respect. They are men who had humble beginnings and came to the top.

"The Prime Minister was once a miner. The President of the United States worked his way through school, and among the jobs he had was the back-breaking job of carrying ice."

The vice president added, however, that in citing these similarities "I do not overlook the fact we have major problems between us."

The atmosphere at the dinner contrasted with the two days of Soviet criticism of Nixon since his arrival here Thursday, to open the American national exhibit.

But the vice president's friendship mission had shifted into high gear earlier Saturday. He was loudly applauded by 5,000 Russians when he arrived for a handshaking tour of the Soviet agricultural and industrial exhibition.

Nixon easily turned aside the heckling of one lone Russian. He traded friendship toasts with Agriculture Minister Vladimir Matskevich.

The vice president answered the Soviet minister's grumbling about Captive Nations Week, observed in the United States for nations dominated by communism. This is the issue that got Nixon's mission off to a shaky start.

In a busy day, Nixon had called on First Deputy Premiers Frol R. Kozlov and Anastas I. Mikoyan.

Nixon also announced he will begin a two-day visit to Poland Aug. 2. This decision was reached in part because the Soviet Union refused to let him end his 11-day tour by flying out over eastern Siberia. That region is studded with secret installations, air fields and naval bases.

NIXON, NIKITA CLASH ON TV NETWORK TODAY

NEW YORK (AP)—The video tape recording of the sizzling exchange between Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev was released Saturday night.

A snarl of confusion that reached halfway around the world and apparently involved State Department efforts not to offend the Russians had first threatened to delay indefinitely the first American showing.

Just exactly how it was all straightened out was not clear even yet, but the three major networks promptly scheduled the dramatic face-to-face wrangle on their 11 p.m. news shows. NBC will also show the tape in color Sunday at 6 p.m. EST.

They called wire services to announce they had received a go-ahead.

The video tape recording arrived here by plane Saturday morning and was scheduled to have been shown at various times Saturday and Sunday by the ABC, CBS and NBC television networks.

But before they could get on the air with it, they began to encounter an exasperating and puzzling series of circumstances.

First came word from the State Department that American showing of the 16-minute color recording was to be held up until a copy could be made and sent to Moscow for simultaneous transmission over Soviet TV. That would require at least a day or two.

Then began a rash of telephone calls to Washington and Moscow to ascertain who issued the order and what prompted it. The results led to even further consternation.

At first, the networks got the idea that Nixon himself was the originator and that the delay stemmed from an agreement with Khrushchev.

Then the networks got through to Nixon and his aides, who expressed surprise over the situation. A CBS correspondent with Nixon informed his office here that the vice president disclaimed responsibility for the order.

Fear Other Strikes Will Shut Down All Metal Production

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials are worried that aluminum and copper industry strikes may soon develop as a companion to the 11-day steel strike — shutting down virtually all U.S. metal production.

Walkouts in aluminum or copper, or both, might cause President Eisenhower to reconsider invoking the Taft-Hartley law's national emergency provisions leading to court injunctions to suspend the strikes.

So far Eisenhower has steered clear of utilizing the law's 80-day strike-stopping powers. The White House apparently feels such a respite would merely postponed the labor-management showdown that must eventually and inevitably be faced. The theory is the same problems likely would exist after the 80 days ran out.

It is not lack of metal for defense and civilian industry that worries officials. There are on hand comfortable supplies of aluminum and copper, as there are of steel.

It is the collateral effect on the nation's economy that has officials most concerned. Already an estimated 78,000 workers in railroads, coal and allied industries have been idled by the steel strike. Without a steel labor settlement, and none now seems in prospect, the layoffs will grow.

If the approximately 120,000 aluminum and copper workers go out on strike, joining the 500,000 already - idled steelworkers, the job displacement figure could mushroom quickly to a million or more.

This would have its effects on purchasing power and dent the over-all national prosperity.

Aluminum industry contracts run out next Friday midnight. Several unions including the steelworkers, already on strike against steel producers, are threatening a walkout. Union settlement proposals have been rejected in New York negotiations.

Major copper industry contracts expired June 30. The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union, an independent, has been continuing work on a day-to-day basis.

ISRAEL'S CHIEF RABBI DIES

Nixon's Visit To Poland Will Test U.S. Diplomacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's surprise trip to Poland offers a test of the highest order in U.S. cold war diplomacy.

It will be the first visit by a high U.S. official to a "captive" Communist country.

The visit will follow hard on the heels of a week's tour by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev of the neighboring Red satellite. It will be made at the expiration of the U.S.-declared "Captive Nations Week" which so aroused Khrushchev's ire.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty announced Nixon would stop off at Warsaw Aug. 2 at the invitation of Alexander Zawadzki, chairman of the Council of States of the Polish People's Republic. Hagerty said the trip will give occasion for "an exchange of views between the vice president and leading political personalities" in Poland.

Nixon plans to spend a day in the Polish capital, another in a Polish coastal city. He anticipates talks with Communist party chief Wladyslaw Gomulka and meetings with rank-and-file citizens as well.

Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover and Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, the President's brother, will accompany Nixon. They have been with the vice president on his 11-day Soviet jaunt which ends Aug. 2. Rickover, who played a leading role in development of the U.S. atomic submarine, was born in a village near Warsaw.

Composer George Gershwin was 39 when he died in 1937.

To Build World's Largest Rocket Test Tower

AZUSA, Calif. (AP) — The free world's biggest rocket test stand —an eight-story tower capable of holding a cluster of rockets generating six million pounds of thrust—will be built at Edwards Air Force base starting late this year.

Aerojet-General Corp. Saturday announced it had been given a contract to design the structure.

Initial plans call for a test stand that can handle two 1½ million pound thrust liquid-rocket engines, now under development for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Later the stand will be expanded to support four of these engines.

The concrete and steel stand, perched on the side of a rocky cliff at the desert test center 100 miles north of Los Angeles, will have a 60-foot square opening for the rockets' exhaust.

Japanese Fashion Model, Akiko Kojima, Gives Orient First Miss Universe Title

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—A willowy Japanese fashion model —first to give the Orient the Miss Universe title — Saturday began her reign "floating on a cloud and living a dream."

"I had to pinch myself to be sure it was not a dream," 22-year-old Akiko Kojima of Tokyo beamed upon awakening after her wildly acclaimed midnight selection.

The 5-foot 6-inch beauty, with 37-23-38 measurements, cried "Oh, my gosh!" when she was announced the winner among the five finalists.

"I am, oh, so very happy," she said, tears shining in her eyes as 4,200 spectators rose and cheered.

Miss Kojima narrowly edged out Miss Norway, Jorunn Kristiansen, 18, for the title, which means $10,000 in cash prizes, other awards and a year of touring the world.

Miss United States, Terry Lynn Huntingdon, 19, was third; Miss England, Pamela Anne Searle, 21, fourth, and Miss Brazil, Vera Ribeiro, 19, fifth.

Miss Kojima awakened on her first day as Miss Universe to find a crowd of reporters and photographers at her hotel room door.

Her reaction to winning?

"Mainly disbelief," she said through an interpreter.

"When it came down to five finalists, I eliminated myself and considered it a toss-up among the others."

Dressed in a delicate white negligee and smoking a cigarette, Miss Kojima answered questions while her hairdresser worked on her shimmering dark hair.

Miss Kojima disclosed that she has received movie offers.

"I plan to make tests next week at Warner Bros. and 20th Century-Fox," she said.

"I would like to make a movie or two if I am asked, and then return to Japan for a visit."

But she said she would like to make the United States her home eventually, marry and raise a family. She said her true ambition is to be "a lovely wife."

Sleek Dresses For Autumn

Dresses for daytime wear this fall stress simplicity, neatly-curved and natural lines. The jacket dress is one that will be seen everywhere. This one (left) is by Donald Brooks for Townley in amethyst-colored tweed. Dress has high, round neckline and short sleeves. Jacket has appliqued leaf design at front. Red worsted wool dress by Larry Aldrich has cardigan front and pleated skirt stitched at top hipline to eliminate bulkiness. Neckline is ideal for many-stranded necklace. Many daytime dresses are done in neutral colors, too.

BY GAILE DUGAS

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The daytime dress is sleek and simple this fall, an ideal background for beautiful jewelry. Shaped to the body lines and frequently done in beige, dark gray or black, it catches the eye through belt and sleeve treatments.

The widened shoulder that predominates in suits also is used for daytime dresses in wool or crepe. Again, this broadened shoulder is achieved by seaming rather than padding. It's often paired with a collarless, simple neckline.

A little jacket is good company for the fall daytime dress, an influence that carries over into late day fashions. It can be collarless and straight or cut with wide-away, rounded neckline and buttoned straight down the front. Whatever the cut, it's everywhere. With jacket buttoned, it moves into the suit realm.

Big sleeves, at elbow length or shorter, are a natural balance for sleek body lines. And belts assume a new prominence in the form of cummerbunds, ties, sashes, or high girdle effects.

The sleek daytime dress usually has a rounded hipline produced by a series of small tucks. But where it isn't smooth and straight, it's likely to be pleated. Pleats, this fall, are handled for a maximum of grace and so designed as to remove that bulky look from the hip area.

While the neutral colors are big this fall, there are flashes of vivid cerise, violet, red, royal blue and some muted greens.

Volunteers Plan Construction Of Pre-Fab Building

Members of the Morgan County Fair Association and all volunteers will finish construction of a pre-fab show ring building at the west side fairgrounds Monday and Tuesday.

Anyone interested in furthering the efforts of the Morgan County Fair is invited to participate in the project. An all-metal building is at the site; footings have been poured and erection is expected to take about two days.

The show ring will be the site of livestock judging during the fair—August 5-8.

No experience is necessary. Expert supervision will be provided. Volunteers are asked to bring a hammer.

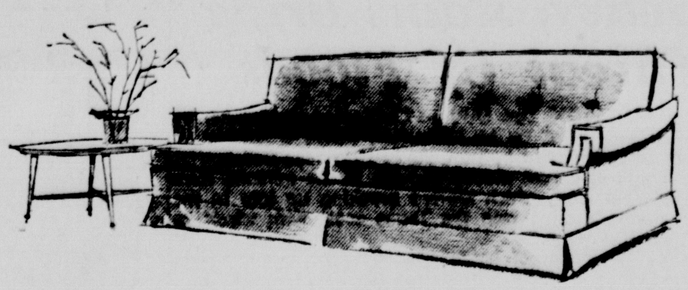

SETS HIM STRAIGHT

DES MOINES (AP)—A young Des Moines executive decided that, in the interests of good will, he would say a friendly word to everyone he met in his building. But after he met one woman he modified the policy.

The woman's reply:

"Young man, I do not like to be spoken to by people I do not know."

LATE CHRISTMAS

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — It's a Yuletide tradition in the David Tucker family here to let their 5-year-old son, Patrick, light the Christmas tree.

But Mrs. Tucker never got around to throwing away last year's tree. There it stood on the back porch, brown, brittle and droopy.

But recently Patrick decided to light the tree once again. This time he used a match.

Firemen said the blaze did $25 damage to the porch.

PUSH-BUTTON TELEPHONE—Comely Gayle Grebs tries out an experimental push-button telephone in New York. It is under development at Bell laboratories and may eventually replace the usual rotary setup. The arrangement of 10 buttons—one for each digit—consists of three horizontal rows of three each, plus the zero or operator button at the bottom. Push-button dialing takes about five seconds, compared to nine for rotary dialing.

Fire First Shot In Hemline War Monday

The annual battle of the hemline will be joined Monday. Paris fires first shot then on fall and winter fashions.

The latest news from the front is that some like them short and some like them long.

Dior's designer Yves St.-Laurent has vowed he'll maintain the status quo that's shortish.

But Lanvin Castillo declares, "Monsieur Castillo doesn't want to see any calves this season."

But if the hemline is to be a divided issue, French designers are at least agreed on colors. They will be almost mournfully sober, with brown and black to the forefront.

Nobody seems to want to emphasize the waistline too much. Necklines will bare a lot, probably more in width than in depth.

The all-over silhouette will be tall and slim, rather than flaring. Many designers have sworn off stiffened petticoats. St. Laurent has declared them dead.

Paris is looking forward to a "good and interesting season, particularly with the American buyers, because volume of business and profits are good in America," Jacques Heim, president of the High Fashion Syndicate, said in an interview.

The gap between French and American fashion prices is rapidly closing, according to Heim, because while Paris prices are fairly stabilized, costs are going up in America. In other words, the American buyers should find less to grumble about, although Heim admits that increased fabric prices have made a small difference this season.

New Fall Fashions To Make Women Look Like Women

NEW YORK (AP)—Women will look like women this fall and men will whistle at the new fashions.

This is the consensus of 200 visiting fashion editors viewing the opening fall showings of the couture group of the New York Dress Institute. Audible sighs of relief and enthusiastic applause greeted the first collections, shown by designers Jane Erby, Donald Brooks, Yves Saint-Laurent, and Robert Knox.

The new clothes have waistlines in the middle, wider shoulders, easy fit and a choice of full or slim skirts. Anybody should be happy with such a choice, it is agreed.

Jane Derby shows a collection of beautiful, wearable clothes with her usual touch of elegance. The collection is notable for luxurious fabric and strictly feminine styling.

Donald Brooks, a young American designer showing his first collection for the House of Town'ey as successor to the late Claire McCardell, presented fashions in two moods — full-skirted, draped and swirled, or military and precise. Both are effective.

The Dior New York collection, designed by Saint-Laurent, is most dramatic in the late-day and evening fashions, which look wicked, French and exciting.

His swirled, draped cocktail and dance dresses indicate a person of social brilliance. Notable is a flame taffeta dance dress with a Spanish flair, called "cha-cha-cha", with tiered pouffed ruffles at the hemline and a bit of drape forming the bodice.

Knox, designer for the House of Ben Gershel, shows a wearable, feminine collection of basic suits and coats—the kind that will see a working girl smartly through any daytime occasion, and sail confidently through several sessions without looking dated.

RISKY THIEVERY

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — It was only a routine building check, so police officers H. K. Downey and J. W. Brock didn't worry when they left their patrol car. But when they returned it was gone. Fifteen minutes later the embarrassed officers found the car parked in front of a nearby cafe.

Trees and flower plants suffer most in frigid winter weather because the cold keeps moisture needed by the roots locked in the soil.

FROM PRIVATE WHITE HOUSE REPORTS —

Ike's Plan For Revamping Government

He Considers Centralizing Power in Fewer Hands for Quicker Decisions

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—To fight the cold war more effectively, President Eisenhower is working on plans to revamp gradually the top echelon of the United States government.

The President's program aims at centralizing more executive power in the hands of a few men. It is designed for quicker decisions, quicker action. It will stir up one of the major debates in U. S. history.

Mr. Eisenhower's plan assumes:

A long military stalemate and at least a generation more of war-like Soviet- U. S. economic and political dueling.

That the U. S. must go on the economic-political offensive against Russia at once or eventually be defeated.

That the cold war must be total, fought with coordinated military-economic-political - psychological strategy by all agencies of the government.

This reform will be limited to the Executive Branch—the roles of the President and his assistants, the Cabinet, the National Security Council, the 10 major departments and 87 or so independent agencies.

It will not affect the roles of Congress or the Supreme Court. It will be presented next year.

No details of the plan are firm. But President Eisenhower has felt strongly about this reorganization since 1952. He has had private unpublished studies made by close advisors. Here are major suggestions from these private reports:

The National Security Council—the President's cold war strategy board—would be reorganized and given more power.

This revised Council would be even more like an inner Cabinet or super Cabinet. Its name might even be changed. Or the present Council thrown out and a new one created.

The new Security Council would include more full-time high-level strategists, men divorced from running a major department or independent agency.

These men would have time to rise above day-to-day decision and think about national and international problems on the big scale.

Today's National Security Council spends much time discussing what to do to counter Russian moves. The revised Council, under the initiative of two deputy presidents of the United States, would act on aggressive, long-range overall strategic plans.

These plans would be proposed by Security Council staff planners. They'd be designed to capture the cold-war initiative and put the Russians on the defensive.

Two new deputy presidents of the United States would be created, though they would not be called by that name. They would be like super Cabinet Officers, one to ram-rod foreign strategy, the other domestic.

There's a precedent: the creation of a Secretary of Defense to oversee the Army, Navy and Air Force Departments.

The deputy president for foreign affairs would direct the cold war battle overseas. He'd supervise the State Department, the U. S. Information Agency, the International Cooperation Administration and activities of the Defense, Commerce, Agriculture, Labor and Treasury Departments and the independent agencies insofar as they affect foreign affairs.

He would have a staff to investigate and make certain the decisions on foreign strategy of the President and the National Security Council were carried out by every department and agency.

And he would have a staff of policy experts to work out coordinated strategy plans for submitting to the National Security Council.

The assistant president for domestic affairs would make certain that decisions on the domestic economy were carried out with coordination and dispatch.

Motorist Wonders If Anyone Stays Home

By BEN PHLEGAR
AP Automotive Writer

DETROIT (AP)—A motor trip through the heartland of the Middle West gives rise to many thoughts about that modern-day wonder, the automobile.

First of all, when you hit the highways at the peak of the July tourist season it's difficult to realize that anybody stayed home.

This writer, his wife and two children just returned from a 2,200-mile swing from Detroit to Hutchinson and Russell, Kan.

We missed seeing a single accident of any kind, even a bruised fender. We were lucky because several cars that passed us were accidents looking for a place to happen.

The trip insurance sold in vending machines at service plazas on the Indiana toll road is more expensive than similar insurance sold at airports for plane travelers.

A big city driver accustomed to bumper-to-bumper traffic advertises his home area when he cuts sharply in front of the car he is passing although the road ahead may be clear for half a mile or more.

The railings on bridges across famous rivers like the Mississippi and Missouri invariably are placed at eye level for a car passenger. On many of them you might as well be in a tunnel.

The lowest state gas tax in the Midwest is Missouri's three-cent levy. This doesn't mean the pump price is much less although a gas war on the east edge of Kansas City brought the price of standard brands down to 21.9 cents a gallon briefly. Why is it that when you pass through such an area you've just filled the tank a few miles back?

From Detroit, Mich., the auto capital, our route took us through Detroit, Ill., and Detroit, Kan. Neither has a single auto dealer.

At Montpelier, Ohio, the lone mechanic in a Chevrolet agency was faced with replacing the huge wraparound windshield in a 1959 model. Assisting him were two garage helpers and the owner of the car, who had driven 20 miles to Angola, Ind., to pick up the new windshield. Cost of the job—$126, to be paid by an insurance company.

At a Sinclair station just west of Louisiana, Mo., on U.S. 54 an attendant uses corn cobs to clean bugs off windshields. It works so well the station buys the corn cobs by the bushel.

Uncle Sam To Bolster Shaky Cotton Throne

By OVID A. MARTIN
Associated Press Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Uncle Sam takes new steps beginning Aug. 1 to bolster the tottering throne of King Cotton.

From the once proud and unchallenged ruler of the fiber world, America's cotton position in international trade slumped during the marketing year now ending.

The principal reason was that foreign cottons undersold this country's coton.

Now, the Agriculture Department has set up a program to make U.S. cotton fully competitive with other cottons in world markets and a little more competitive with man-made fibers in this country.

Exports of U.S. cotton during the marketing year which ends July 31 are indicated at about 2,800,000 bales. This is a little less than half the 5,700,000 bales sold abroad during the previous year. Some 7,600,000 bales were sold the year prior to that.

Three or four decades ago approximately half of all the cotton consumed outside this country was produced here. In the past five years the U.S. share has averaged only about a seventh.

Much of the difficulty encountered stems from the fact that American farm price support programs have tended to hold cotton above world market prices.

When these programs first were started, this did not make too much difference because there was not enough produced elsewhere to hurt.

During the marketing year now ending, the government has offered an export subsidy of 6½ cents a pound—or about $32.50 a bale—on cotton sold abroad. This offer was made in an effort to make the American fiber competitive. But many other countries undercut this. Hence, exports dropped sharply from the previous year, when a similar subsidy was more effective.

But this subsidy has been increased to 8 cents a pound—or $40 a bale—for the season beginning Aug. 1. The department has said, however, that if this does not do the job, it will increase the subsidy still more.

Other exporting countries have expressed unhappiness over this American move. But U.S. officials have promised that there will be no further increase in the subsidy—if U.S. competitors refrain from further price-cutting.

A new and lower price support program becoming effective Aug. 1 is expected to reduce the cotton level in this country between 2½ and 3 cents a pound.

This reduction will be reflected in the export price along with the 8 cent a pound subsidy. It also will enable domestic mills and other users to buy cotton a little more cheaply than in other recent years.

Officials believe that this reduction should enable cotton to complete more effectively with synthetic fibers. The latter have made sharp gains in use in clothing and other items in this country since inauguration of price support programs.

TRUCK RAMS CAR ON MAUVAISTERRE

The emergency brake gave way and a truck crashed into the rear of a parked auto, knocking it into a utility pole about 9:30 a.m. Friday on North Mauvaisterre. Neither vehicle was occupied at the time.

The truck was driven by Wayne Buxton, Springfield, and the auto owned by Wayne L. Taylor, 131 Webster.

The truck was not damaged but the auto received damage to both the rear and front ends.

City police attended at the scene.

CHICAGO (AP) — The butcher hog market continued in a slump all week with prices of barrows and gilts declining 25 cents to $1 a hundredweight.

Most of the setback was on spring pigs under 220 lbs which were offered in large volume while wholesale pork prices also were sagging on slow demand. Sows and heavyweight butcher grades, however, held steady to 25 cents lower.

The succession of setbacks had dropped the average cost of all butcher hogs on Thursday to $13.68, the lowest since in March 1956. The peak prices also were at new three-year lows on three days.

Shippers bought more than half the 37,500 head on sale.

The cattle supply for the week was little changed from a week ago but offerings on Monday were the largest for any Monday since in May and comprised about two-thirds of the total for the period.

However, supplies were rather meager later and clearance was good at the end of the week despite a considerable carryover from Monday and only a moderately active demand at best.

Slaughter steers were 25 to 75 cents lower for the week on weights over 1,100 lbs and steady to 25 cents lower on lighter weights.

Offerings on the sheep market were 50 per cent larger than the previous week and consisted mainly of spring slaughter lambs which were 50 cents higher. Shorn yearlings were 50 cents to $1 higher and ewes steady.

New York Stock Market

By SHEP CAMPBELL
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A flock of healthy corporate earnings reports snapped the stock market out of its steel strike doldrums this week.

The rosy first-half profit picture of most companies apparently tempered investor anxiety about the economic backlash of a lengthy steel industry shutdown. The market had retreated last week with the onset of the steel strike.

Trading moved at a cautious pace, though volume quickened when prices pushed higher and dwindled during the declines.

The market began the week by lengthening the losses absorbed during the previous week.

But prices recouped much of this lost ground with brisk rallies on Tuesday and Wednesday. The market then dug in to cement these gains on Thursday and Friday.

Over-all, The Associated Press average of 60 stocks stepped up $1.40 to $231.80. The Dow Jones industrial index, which hit a new closing peak of 664.63 after the mid-week recovery, added 6.59 on the week at 663.72.

Transactions totaled 14,785,280 shares, down from 15,557,890 last week.

Besides the round of sparkling corporate earnings, investor interest was ignited by such market stimulants as reports of recent records in the nation's output of goods and services, cost of living and personal income.

Both U.S. government and corporate bonds moved indecisively this week, ending with small gains and losses.

Trading totaled $26,019,500 par value on the New York Stock Exchange compared with $25,062,220 the previous week and $24,836,000 in 1958.

BEANS HOLD CENTER OF STAGE IN WEEK OF DULL TRADING

By GIL MAYO
AP Business News Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures held almost all the attention in an otherwise dull grain business this week on the Board of Trade.

Except for one fast, decisive setback on Thursday they have been the most bullish commodity on the board since corn futures advanced about 20 cents a bushel in a sustained four-weeks climb early last spring.

When the break came in soybean prices, they had run up gains of about 12 cents a bushel in spots in eight trading days. The steep slide, however, knocked off about four cents where the gains were the broadest.

The selling was ascribed more to simple profit taking than anything else although it followed closely reports of good fairly general rainfall over most of the principal producing areas.

All grain dealings were slow and without any significant influences anytime during the week. Price changes were narrow.

At the end of the week, wheat was unchanged to 1¾ cents a bushel higher than a week ago, September $1.89⅝-¾; corn 1 cent higher to ⅞ lower, September higher, September new type contract 68-67⅞; rye unchanged to ½ lower, September $1.29-28⅞; soybeans ⅝-1¾ higher, September $2.19⅝-⅞.

Report Lloyd Pressing For Summit Meet

dent Eisenhower what Lloyd presumably is saying to his partners here.

Gloomier, more suspicious of Red intentions, Christian A. Herter and French and West German Foreign Ministers Maurice Couve de Murville and Heinrich von Brentano do not share the confidence of the British.

They are thinking along other lines, although the events of the next few days could swing them around to Lloyd's way of thinking. As of now Herter, for instance, is believed toying with the idea of a long recess in the negotiations unless the Soviets soften terms for a truce.

NIXON, KHRUSHCHEV TALK OF PEACE

Despite his public differences with Khrushchev, which were getting a general airing in the Soviet press, there was no show of public resentment when Nixon turned up at the Soviet exhibition. This show has been set up as a rival attraction to the U.S. exhibition Nixon formally opened Friday.

The crowds in the grounds saw Nixon and his party draw up in a U.S. Embassy limousine and at once broke into vigorous applause. Nixon got out and began his hand-shaking. Crowds followed him through the exhibition halls.

At the Hall of the Uzbek Republic, one Russian in the crowd took up the official cry against Captive Nations Week. He declared it was a Western provocation to say that the Soviet Union enslaved other nations.

"I'm in favor of free speech and I am glad you were able to talk," Nixon replied.

Nixon ran into the same theme when he called on the agriculture minister for luncheon.

"The Soviet people," said Matskevich, "were surprised and alarmed that the Senate passed the captive peoples' resolution. We were prepared for a peaceful and friendly welcome for Mr. and Mrs. Nixon.

"We will have differences from time to time," Nixon replied. "We disagree with your comments on this resolution. When Khrushchev refers to us as imperialists or colonialists we do not like it, and reaction is adverse. But we respect his right to say it.

'We believe in the competition of ideas and there must be competition of ideas to gain the greatest progress for the world. We hope we can have an everlasting friendship between our two peoples."

Nixon's meeting with Kozlov appeared friendly. Nixon said that "we have been very pleased by your reception by people in all walks of life."

Jury Deliberates Fate Of Pair Convicted Of Murdering Young Boys

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—The jury deliberating the fate of Wanda Brogdon and Archie Merriam, of Rockford, Ill., appeared closer to verdict Saturday night.

The jury of six men and six women must decide whether Mrs. Brogdon, 33, and Merriam, 36, get a life term or death in the gas chamber for the May 2 strangulation of Mrs. Brogdon's two sons.

The jury has been deliberating since Friday. The same jurors convicted the couple of first degree murder Thursday night.

Judge William T. Mahedy asked jury foreman William J. Karnes how the voting was going.

Karnes replied the panel was 7-5 in the Merriam case and 11-1 in Mrs. Brogdon's case—but didn't indicate which way.

The jurors asked the judge for information about parole. Mahedy cautioned them that the matter of passing sentence—in the event a life term is decreed—is solely a matter for the judge to decide. However, he added, jurors may make recommendations for parole if life imprisonment is decreed.

During the trail Merriam testified he strangled David, 3, and Virgil Brogdon Jr., 5, at their mother's instigation. Mrs. Brogdon denied this from the witness stand.

The couple came here with Mrs. Brogdon's children from Rockford, about two weeks before the boys were slain.

Harry Grayson's SCOREBOARD

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — A chat with Charles Dillon Stengel left this department with the idea that baseball is about to lose its most unique character, one who has left a deep impression on the game for nearly a half century.

From what I gathered, inimitable Casey Stengel definitely is ready to step down as manager of the New York Yankees he guided to nine pennants and seven world championships in 10 years.

It is my hunch that Stengel will call it an illustrious career if the erstwhile Bombers win again this fall. A proud old guy, he would like to bow out in the grand manner — winner of five straight for the second time in 11 years, and able to point out that the Cleveland Indians had to win a record 111 games the one time he ran second.

Finishing anywhere but first this trip, Stengel might come back for one more whirl. He wouldn't want to quit a loser or saddle someone else with a lot of ulcer stirrers.

There are several reasons why it is time for Stengel to make a move.

And the fact that Ralph Houk, the coach considered the heir apparent in the Bronx, rejected the chance to manage the affluent Boston Red Sox, before the job was handed to Billy Jurges the other day, could be highly significant. Houk's explanation is that he didn't want to take over a bad club in midseason. The Major also knows that he has been schooled to command the Yankees—at the Stadium under Stengel and for three years in Denver.

* * *

STENGEL WILL BE 68, give or take a year, on July 30. He is extremely wealthy and has a wife, Edna, to match. Oil, a hotel and real estate purchased in the 1920's led to Stengel being named director of a Glendale, Calif., bank last winter.

"Casey had to open his own bank," remarked Fresco Thompson, the old infielder who directs the Los Angeles Dodgers' minor league operations. "The other banks wouldn't take any more of his money."

For this and other reasons, the fact that Stengel's two-year contract with the Yankees runs through 1960 means nothing. He can manage the club as long as he cares to and leave the same way. He is Co-Owner-Contractor Del E. Webb's baseball man.

When Webb brought the then 57-year-old Stengel from Oakland of the Pacific Coast League to manage the Yankees in 1949, the job was a challenge to the wise-cracking old outfielder who was considered something of a buffoon while piloting nothing to nowhere for 10 years in the National League. The Yankees had won only one pennant in five campaigns.

* * *

STENGEL GOT A TREMENDOUS kick out of beating Joe McCarthy and the Red Sox in the final game of 1949.

Ol' Case went into ecstasies when he plucked Mickey Mantle and Gil McDougald out of the recruit school held in Phoenix in the spring of 1951.

"I just hope I live long enough to manage the kids on our chain," he said, pointing to where he predicted Mantle would hit the ball out of Yankee Stadium, let alone into the stands.

Pennants commenced to come easy. The Yankees won 103 games the only year they failed to take it all. But there was talk about the deterioration of the Yankee farm system. They cut down from two to one Triple A club. The source of talent finally seemed clogged. Old reliable hands are getting old.

* * *

MANAGING SUDDENLY BECAME a chore for Stengel this season, when the club dropped to last place for the first time in 19 years. The Old Man admitted he was wrong when he returned McDougald to shortstop and Bobby Richardson to second base, but the engine sputtered again after one solid drive.

In addition to the difficulties on the field, Stengel until recently this season was annoyed by a form of eczema which kept him scratching and half nuts.

"How much longer are you going to manage?" I asked him.

"I don't blame you for asking the question, but I'm not answering it now," he replied.

A year ago he would have said, "As long as I feel well," or, "They'll have to cut this uniform off me."

With half the season gone, and the league better balanced than ever before, Stengel must be wondering if he can get the old machine there first.

The way it looks now that would put an end to Casey Stengel's baseball headaches.

Ol' Case has had enough and would quit while he's ahead.

George Blanda To Retire From Pro Football

RENSSELAER, Ind. (AP) — Veteran Chicago Bear quarterback George Blanda, holder of the National Football League record for consecutive extra points, is retiring from football, the team announced Saturday.

Blanda, who kicked 156 straight extra points between 1951 and 1956, will devote all his time to his work with a Chicago trucking firm. He played 10 years with the Bears.

The Bears, meanwhile, began running through plays as most of the team's veterans arrived Saturday at the St. Joseph's College training camp. Rookies have been at the camp since the beginning of the week.

Coach George Halas will hold three sessions a day, two outdoor drills and one lecture session each evening. Contact plays will not start for about 10 days, a team spokesman said.

August Football Classic Survives Through Years

EVANSTON, Ill.—In 1934, when the Chicago Tribune sponsored for charity a football game between college seniors graduated that year, and the Chicago Bears, champions of professional football, few would have predicted its continued success.

Yet this football spectacle, the All-Star game, will be played Aug. 14 in Soldiers' Field for the 26th consecutive year. The game survived World War II, with its handicap of insufficient material. It has contributed more than $2,000,000 to Chicago Charity.

In 1934 the game was played before 79,000. On Aug. 14 the crowd in Soldiers' Field will be augmented by millions watching television on more than 130 stations and hearing it by radio on more than 500 stations.

The All-Star football game never was intended to be a test of skill between university seniors and professional players but it has developed continued interest because the graduates, in general, have made the rivalry a contest. Then, too, this game has become Chicago's own, an occasion for review of the gridiron greats of the nation.

As might be expected, the professional champions of the National Football League have won a majority of the games, having accounted for 15 victories to eight for the All-Stars. Two games ended in tie scores.

With the appearance Aug. 14 of the Baltimore Colts, ten of the 12 teams in the National League have won the right to appear in the All-Star contest. The Chicago Bears have played in the All-Star game six times while Detroit has made four appearances. Green Bay and Cleveland have opposed the All-Stars three times each, while Washington, New York, Los Angeles and Philadelphia have twice played against the Collegians. The Chicago Cardinals played in one All-Star game. Now only San Francisco and Pittsburgh of the professional league have not qualified for the rivalry.

LARGEST STRIPER

CUTTYHUNK, Mass. —NEA)—Trolling off Cuttyhunk, Nathaniel Gifford of New Bedford landed a 62-pound striped bass, measuring 54 inches with a girth of 29. It is the largest striper of the season.

Tickets Go On Sale For Hawks - Syracuse Contest September 1

Pre-season training plans are expected to be announced within two weeks by the St. Louis Hawks, who will be trying for an unprecedented fourth consecutive Western Division championship next season. The St. Louisians are investigating a number of training sites but in all probability will remain in the St. Louis area for the two-week session.

The Hawks and Syracuse will tangle in a regular pre-season game at the Jacksonville High School Gym Wednesday evening, Oct. 14. Tickets will go on sale around Sept. 1 at Mac's Clothes Shop in Jacksonville.

The Hawks, in four years in St. Louis, have finished second once and first three times, winning one world championship. They lost to Boston in the second overtime of the final game in a best out-of seven game series. Last year the Hawks lost to Minneapolis in the Western Division finals after injuries to key players had weakened the club.

Syracuse—the hottest club in the league the final half of the season last year—won the world title in 1955 under Al Cervi. They finished third last year but played better than .600 ball for the second half of the season.

Coached by Paul Seymour, who at 30, has had 13 years of experience in the NBA both as a player and coach, the Nationals figure to be one of the top teams again next season. Seymour has been actively coaching the club the past three years and only until last January did he get "his kind of club together."

The addition of George Yardley, from Detroit, and the resurgence of Hal Greer into a high-scoring backcourt man gave Seymour the punch and polish he needed to mold a winner.

Yardley won the league scoring title two years ago scoring 2,001 points—a new all-time mark that was broken by the Hawks' Bob Pettit last year. But injuries hampered Yardley last season and he asked to be traded to another club. Once he joined the Nats (with a broken hand incidently), he regained his touch and the Syracuse club averaged 134 points a game over one 24-game stretch.

The Nats' fine finish is indicative of their present power—and their playoff showing against the Boston Celtics indicated that the Beantowners are in for more trouble again this year.

New Berlin Bows To Virginia Nine, 6-0

A sixth-inning pinch-hit single spoiled Ricky Smith's bid for a no-hit, no-run verdict Friday night in Virginia's 6-0 triumph over New Berlin in the Jacksonville Sub-District Tournament. Smith fanned the first eight men to face him and wound up striking out 13 of the 18 batters he faced.

Decker's home run in the third inning with a man on provided the winning margin but the victors collected four more runs, two of which came on a round tripper by Revis.

McLish Hurls Indians Past Washington, 8-1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cal McLish chalked up his eighth straight victory Saturday, an easy 8-1 decision over the Washington Senators as the Cleveland Indians won their third straight. Jim Piersall led a 13-hit attack with three hits, including a three-run homer.

McLish became the winningest pitcher in the American League (13-3) by limiting the Senators to seven hits. He lost his bid for a shutout when Jim Lemon cracked his 22nd home run in the seventh inning.

Piersall, subbing in center field for the team's leading hitter, Tito Francona, who suffered a pulled muscle two days ago, responded with a single, double and home run. Minnie Minoso had three singles and Vic Power extended his hitting streak through 11 games with a fourth-inning double.

The Indians tagged Bill Fischer, the starting Washington hurler, for five runs in the first four innings and sent him to his fifth defeat in 13 decisions.

15 Phillies Go Down Swinging But They Win 6-3

CINCINNATI (AP) — Fifteen Philadelphia Phils went down on strikes Saturday but they still came up with the timely hitting, including three important doubles, that brought them a 6-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Joe Nuxhall, the Reds' starting hurler, struck out 11 in six innings but allowed five of the Phil runs before he bowed out for a pinch hitter in the sixth.

Don Cardwell, the winning hurler, allowed only four hits through seven innings. He was relieved by Ray Semproch after being hit with a pitched ball. Cardwell's chores were made easier by two double plays.

Willie Jones, a former Phil, hit into both of them, making it four in two games.

Rube Gomez finally bailed Semproch out of trouble in the ninth.

Nuxhall struck out two Phils in each the first and third but they got two runs in each inning.

Johnny Powers' pinch hit home run was Cincinnati's only run off Cardwell but the Reds got two in the eighth off Semproch. Jerry Lynch's single drove them in after two singles and a walk had filled the bases.

ADVERTISE — IT PAYS

Berra's 2-Run Homer Gives Yanks 9-8 Win Over Detroit Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Yogi Berra walloped a two-run home run in the ninth inning that gave the jittery New York Yankees a 9-8 decision over the Detroit Tigers Saturday in a frantic baseball contest witnessed by 26,530.

Mickey Mantle, who could not get the ball past the pitcher's mound in four previous at bats, set the stage for Berra's climactic smash by beating out a bouncer to third base by an eyelash.

By winning, the Yankees boosted their margin over the fifth place Detroiters to two games.

They stumbled and fumbled around for more than three hours in this wild exhibition before gaining the decision. The Yankees handed the Tigers five unearned runs and committed five errors, three of them by third baseman Hector Lopez. A two-out bobble by Lopez gave Detroit two runs in the seventh and another two-out fumble let in an eight inning run.

Lopez also threw away Coot Veal's bounder leading off in the ninth, but the Detroit shortstop was out trying to reach second base. On that play, Veal crashed into first baseman Bill Skowron, who was making his first appearance in the New York lineup since July 11.

Skowron, who had been out with an ailing back, suffered a bone dislocation in his left wrist. He was taken to a hospital for X-rays.

Burdette Tosses Nifty Four-Hitter At Bucs In Braves' 3-0 Win

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Fidgety Lew Burdette tossed a four-hit masterpiece for his 13th victory Saturday as the Milwaukee Braves strengthened their hold on third place by blanking the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0.

Burdette, who had lost five of his last six outings, was in complete command, allowing only one runner to reach third base. It was the second four-hit shutout for the Braves over the Pirates within 24 hours, Juan Pizarro turning the trick Friday night.

Hank Aaron, the National League batting leader, made his major league debut as a third baseman, filling for the injured Eddie Mathews. Hank collected two hits in three official times at bat but was the cause of great alarm for a split second in the sixth inning. Aaron was hit on the back of the head by a fast ball thrown by Vernon Law and dropped to the ground. However, he was saved from serious injury by his plastic helmet and hopped to his feet unhurt.

Law, now 11-6, gave up only five hits before retiring for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. One of the three runs off him was unearned as a result of his own throwing error.

One World Mark Bettered In U.S.-Japan Meet

OSAKA, Japan (AP)—One world record was bettered and two American marks were surpassed as the American squad took an 18-17 lead over Japan at the end of the first day of their swimming competition Saturday.

Frank McKinney of Indianapolis, bettered the world mark in winning the 200-meter backstroke in 2 minutes, 17.8 seconds. He set the old mark of 2:17.9 in the American championships at Los Altos earlier this month.

Alan Somers, also of Indianapolis, defeated Australian Murray Rose, and Japan's Tsuyoshi Yamanaka in winning the gruelling 1,500-meter race in 17:44.4. In finishing third behind Rose and Yamanaka in a meet earlier in the week in Tokyo, Somers was timed in 17:48.9, an American record. Rose won at Tokyo in 17.46.5.

The American 400-meter medley relay team of McKinney, Frederick Munsch of New York, Michael Troy of Indianapolis and Joseph Alkire of San Diego, Calif., bettered the American record with a time of 4:12.6. The listed American record is 4:16.7 made by a U.S. national team in Osaka in 1955.

Jordan, Aragon Will Mix It Up August 25

LOS ANGELES (AP) — World welterweight champion Don Jordan and Art Aragon, onetime Los Angeles golden boy, will meet in a 10-round non-title bout here Aug. 25, matchmaker Jackie Leonard said Saturday.

Leonard, matchmaker for Hollywood Legion Stadium, said the fight will be staged in Los Angeles' Wrigley Field with seats scaled from $3.50 to $15.

He said the two fighters have settled for a 30-30 split of the gate, which Leonard hopes will hit $100,000.

Aragon, now 31 and unranked, beat the 24-year-old Jordan twice before the latter became champion. They were 10-round decisions June 2, 1955 and Dec. 15 of the same year.

Jordan took the title from Virgil Akins in a 15-rounder here last Dec. 8.

Sword Dancer Slices Through To Win Monmouth

OCEANPORT, N. J. (AP)—Sword Dancer sliced through what seemed an almost impossible wall of horses at the top of the stretch Saturday, and under a masterful ride by Willie Shoemaker pulled away for victory in the $113,760 Monmouth Handicap at Monmouth Park.

No sooner had the numbers gone up on the board, than jockey Howard Grant astride the second horse, Amerigo, claimed foul against Sword Dancer.

The claim, however, was not allowed after a study of the movies. Sword Dancer finished two lengths ahead of Amerigo. It was another 1½ lengths back to Talent Show.

Sword Dancer, owned by the Brookmeade Stable of Isabel Dodge Sloane, is a leading contender for the 3-year-old championship. He won the classic Belmont Stakes after finishing second in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

This was the second time Sword Dancer had gone out of his division to challenge the older handicap horses. He beat them in the $100,000 Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont May 3, in which Talent Show, owned by Ada L. Rice, Chicago, was third.

Amerigo is owned by Mrs. Tilyou Christopher and was beaten by a nose by Hillsdale several weeks ago in the $100,000 Californian at Hollywood Park.

Shoemaker hustled Sword Dancer under the wire in 2:05 flat on a track made slow by the week's heavy rains.

Talent Show was 2½ lengths in front of Babu at the finish, while trailing along in order were Nickel Boy, Air Pilot, Plion, Oh Johnny, One-Eyed King, and Portersville.

The crowd of 31,962 bet Sword Dancer heavily, and he paid $3.20, $2.60 and $2.20. Amerigo returned $6.40 and $2.20, and the Talent Show-Air Pilot entry was $2.20.

Johansson Has His Reasons For Delaying Fight

GOTEBERG, Sweden (AP) — There appeared Saturday to be a marked difference of opinion between world heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson and promoter Bill Rosensohn concerning the site and date of a return title match between Johansson and Floyd Patterson.

Johansson said he hoped the bout would be set back until the spring of 1960, and said he realized if his request was granted the site probably would be Los Angeles for climatic reasons.

"The tax people are my bogey," the champion told the Stockholm Expressen.

"But I have another reason for asking that the bout be delayed. I have heard people from both California and Florida say they think the time is not ripe as early as September for a return match. They feel that public interest cannot be turned up again so soon."

Johansson left on an exhibition tour in southern Sweden Saturday about the time Rosensohn arrived in Goteborg, indicating the two would not get together until Monday at least to discuss the proposed bout.

Johansson won the world title by knocking out Patterson in a sensational three-round bout in New York's Yankee Stadium on June 26.

Cubs' Cessarelli Beats San Francisco, 5-3, For His 4th Straight Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Southpaw Art Ceccarelli beat the San Francisco Giants Saturday 5-3 and won his fourth straight for the Chicago Cubs since being called up from Fort Worth three weeks ago.

The loss stopped a three-game winning streak for the National League leaders, who won 6-5 Friday night in 10-innings.

The Giant lead was cut to two games, with second-place Los Angeles playing St. Louis in a night contest.

Ceccarelli set down the Giants with three hits until pinch hitter Hank Sauer poled his first home run of the year over the left centerfield fence in the eighth. Jackie Brandt and Jim Davenport followed with sharp singles and Brandt scored the Giants' last run on Willie Mays' pinch hit sacrifice fly to right.

Eddie Bressoud had homered over the left field fence in the third for the first Giant hit off the stocky Ceccarelli who retired the first seven batters in order.

Stu Miller was tagged for 11 hits in 8 innings before retiring for a pinch hitter. He lost his fifth game against four victories.

NEW YORK (AP)—Taking the lead at the start Waltz led all the way to register a mild surprise victory in the $82,100 Dwyer Handicap at Jamaica Saturday as Bagdad, 4-5 favorite, finished fifth.

Under a masterful ride by Sammy Boulmetis, the 3-year-old gelding owned by W. Arnold Hanger outfinished Middle Brother in a stretch duel. Waltz won by a head in track record time of 1:54 4-5 for the mile and three-sixteenths.

Middle Brother was 4½ lengths ahead of the third horse, Hoist Away.

Waltz, the second choice, paid $6.80, $4.90 and $3.90. Middle Brother returned $6.40 and $4.40 and Hoist Away $5.20 to show.

Endine Earns $108,312 Prize

STANTON, Del. (AP)—Endine, winner of only one race this year, carried the silks of the Christiana Stable to an unprecedented second straight victory Saturday in the richest race in the world for fillies and mares.

The crowd of 24,020 paid little attention to Endine, who ran as an entry with Mooring Stable's Tempted. But the Christiana-Mooring entry went off as co-favorite with J. Graham Brown's Bornastar, mainly on the past performance of Tempted, easy winner here last week of the New Castle Handicap.

Ned W. Brent's 30-1 shot, Polamby, was a driving second. Bornastar, 1958 mare handicap champion, was fourth in the 1¼ mile test for fillies and mares.

Endine, ridden by jockey Paul J. Bailey, won by half a length in 2:03 3-5 and earned $108,312 for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lunger of Wilmington, Del., owner of the Christiana Stable. The 5-year-old Chestnut mare returned $8.50, $5.00 and $6.40.

Polamby returned $19.00 and $11.20 to those who chanced the longshot, while Tempted, paid $6.40 for the show. Polamby earned $26,000 for the runnerup spot, while Tempted picked up $13,000.

Football World Pays Tribute To Jim Tatum

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP)—The football world and this small university town paid final tribute Saturday to Jim Tatum, one of the giants among college coaches.

More than 300 persons, many of them fellow coaches, crowded into the Chapel Hill Methodist Church for funeral services for the University of North Carolina football mentor, who died of a virus infection Thursday night.

The Chapel Hill community, still shocked over the 46-year-old Tatum's sudden death, shut down all business operations during the half-hour services.

Tatum was eulogized by The Rev. Charles Hubbard as "a great man who taught us the real meaning of his well known statement: 'Winning is not the most important thing; it is the only thing.'"

The minister, speaking over a public address system, added: "He played it, and he played it fairly."

Dunce 1st In Arlington Race

CHICAGO (AP)—Light] reckoned Dunce, bay colt son of Tom Fool-Ghazni, turned on a blistering stretch drive to capture the $140,425 Arlington Classic mile in Arlington Park Saturday.

Claiborne Farm's Dunce, given a magnificent ride by Lois C. Cook, won by a length and a half over On-And-On of Calumet Farm.

Dunce, winner of only four of 10 starts, captured the top purse of $78,475 in this feature for 3-year-olds. Dunce was clocked in 1:35 over a fast but dull strip, finishing a full second below Clem's track record of 1:34 for the mile.

Simpson's Pinch-Hit Paces League Leaders To Narrow 3-2 Victory

CHICAGO (AP)—Harry (Suitcase) Simpson's pinch single in the 17th inning sent home the winning run and gave the Chicago White Sox a 3-2 triumph over Baltimore Saturday.

The victory, the 23rd one-run decision captured by Chicago, enabled the White Sox to maintain their one-half game American League lead over Cleveland.

Back-to-back singles by Jim Landis and Sherm Lollar started the 17th inning uprising. Al Smith was given an intentional pass and reliever Billy Loes, third Baltimore pitcher, got Jim Rivera to bounce into a force play at the plate. Simpson, batting for Bubba Phillips, then lined a single to right center to end the marathon.

The 17th inning affair matched the longest game in the majors this year. That was also between Chicago and Baltimore with the Sox winning on a homer by Earl Torgeson.

The Sox blew five different scoring chances in the extra innings after Lollar had tied up the game with a leadoff homer off starter Billy O'Dell in the ninth inning. They left nine runners from the 10th inning on and had two on and only one out in the ninth after Lollar had blasted his 13th homer but couldn't push anybody across.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Sox while Baltimore suffered its fifth defeat in a row to give the Orioles their longest losing string of the season.

Turk Lown, who came on in the 12th inning, gained credit for his seventh triumph against two losses. Loes was shackled with his third loss in seven decisions.

(17 innings)

Baltimore	100 000 010 000 000 00	2	12 3
Chicago	010 000 001 000 000 01	3	12 1

O'Dell, Walker (10), Loes (15) and Ginsberg, Triandos (8); Shaw, Lown (12) and Romano, Lollar (12). W — Lown (7-2). L — Loes (4-3).

Home run—Chicago, Lollar (13).

Most Of Our Trouble Is Bad Baseball: Stengel

By DAVE DILES
Associated Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — "I remember the way we used to win those ball games . . . a little something happens here, a little something there, and then—wham! We'd just close the door and that was it."

But, says Casey Stengel, the New York Yankees aren't winning them that way these days. That's why they are having trouble staying in the American League's first division.

"This club has been too bad for me to think about a pennant," said the grizzled manager. "I've got to think about winning a ball game. I do hope, however, that I'll be able to start worrying about a pennant before long."

It is strange to see the Yankees, proud winners of nine flags in the last decade, struggling to stay within striking distance. At the moment Stengel will settle for just that, staying close enough to the top so that he can make a run for it later.

"I don't think we can make a run right now," he explained. "You see, I got four regular guys out with injuries right now. When I get them back and we're healthy again, I should hope the Yankees won't be dead. They've counted us out already, I know, but I think there's still time for them so-called experts to be very wrong."

Gil McDougald, Bob Turley, Tony Kubek and Bill Skowron all are sidelined. McDougald and Turley should be ready for action soon but the status of Kubek and Skowron is unknown.

Centennial Parade Climaxes Two-Day Festival In Woodson

Nine thousand people lined the streets of the village of Woodson Saturday afternoon as a two-day centennial celebration reached its climax with a gigantic parade. The lengthy parade which moved shortly after 2 p.m. Saturday in a circular route around the city completely enclosed the greater portion of the small village as it made its way around the city and back to the starting point.

Parade Marshall Willard Jones officially started the parade as he led the initial section down the main street past the judges' viewing stand. Jones, wearing a crimson outfit and riding a white horse, was followed by several cars bearing dignitaries and centennial committees before the actual parade entries began.

Special Guests

Special guests for the afternoon celebration were the members of the Great Lakes Naval Training Band under the direction of Harold L. Lewis. The band presented a concert at the park during the hour preceding the parade and composed the lead marching unit at the head of the parade entries.

Miss Woodson, Betty Hembrough, and the floats bearing Miss Jacksonville, Beverly Bray, and Miss Illinois AMVET, Joyce Trowbridge, and other Woodson Centennial Queen candidates followed the band.

Entries in the parade were from surrounding businesses, civic organizations and welfare organizations. The top entry in the parade —that awarded the best entry prize—was a float entered by the Woodson Presbyterian Church depicting a church with an early American setting. A grand prize of a $25 savings bond was awarded the float.

First Prize

First prize in the float division went to the Woodson Elevator for a float showing couples of yesterday, today and tomorrow with the slogan "The Voice of Freedom." Second prize went to the Woodson - Passavant entry. Third prize was awarded to the Murrayville Homemakers Club for a float portraying an old farm family in front of a log cabin.

Other prizes in the parade included Antique Autos: Lawrence Burge, first; Eugene Rawlings, second; Emory Funk, third.

Classic autos: James Rawlings, first; K. Hembrough, second; and Nora Begnell, third.

Miscellaneous: Kathy Wright and Norma Crow, first for an antique baby buggy; Don English and Floyd Beadles, second for a goat and covered wagon; and E. Hawks and J. McGowan, third for a little gas auto.

Covered Wagons

Covered Wagon: Wilbur Lawson, first; Billy Bacon, second; and Earl Farmer, third.

Drawn Equipment: Eugene West, first for a burro and wagon; Darrell Smith, second for a team of goats and wagon; Jill Walker, third for a costumed prospector and burro.

Pony Drawn Equipment: Bill Spaulding, first; Jim Lonergan, second; Bob Hembrough, third.

Saddle Clubs: Morgan County, first; White Hall Club, second; and Town and Country Wranglers, third.

Individual Riders: Lester Bush, first; Dick Miller, second; Robert Henry, third.

Record Crowd

Approaches to the city were lined along both sides of the road for nearly a mile as a record breaking crowd jammed the streets eating burgoo and home made cakes and pies as they enjoyed the once in a hundred years celebration. Soup makers were kept busy all day Saturday as they ladled out 1500 gallons of burgoo to a continuous line of eager customers.

Both bowl and kettle service were available during the day.

Saturday evening guests at the 100th anniversary observance were treated to entertainment by Carl Butler and his band from the Grand Ole Opery and selections from the St. Louis group, The Teen Tones. Both organizations alternated their performances.

Dancing

Dancing from 9 to 12 to the music of the two bands was the closing event of the day. Both bands were available during the evening of dancing to accomodate the large number of people who turned out to help Woodson round out its 36 hour celebration. Centennial festivities officially began Friday at noon when concession stands all over the city opened for business.

Thousands of spectators filled the area in front of a large stage Friday evening to watch the selection and crowning of "Miss Woodson." Betty Hembrough.

Miss Hembrough is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hembrough, Route 5, and a 1958 graduate of Jacksonville High school.

She was chosen from a field of 15 candidates before the large crowd.

First Runner-Up

First runner-up to the queen was Miss Sandra Surratt and second runner-up was Miss Frances Casey. Both girls were featured in the queen's court during the balance of the centennial celebration.

The crowd started flocking toward the Centennial festivities during the middle of the afternoon Friday and by nightfall there was a sea of smiling faces in the audience.

Amateur contests for Woodson contestants and out-of-towners too, consumed a portion of the evening.

Beard Contests

The beard contests climaxed as much as six months of "itching chins" for many of the contestants. Another contest in which the crowd registered its applause was the home-made dresses. The many hours of intricate needelwork needed to make the dresses provided a pleasing display of color and craftsmanship. There was also a contest for the family in best centennial dress.

Bob and David Marshall's interpretation of "Show Business" in a song and dance routine, won for them first place in the amateur talent contest. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Marshall, 801 Lincoln Avenue, Jacksonville.

Bob and David are dance pupils of Mary Jane and Charles Grant, and this is the first time they have entered a contest. They were accompanied by Mrs. Robert Sassenberger at the piano.

13th Accident At Morton-Diamond Since January 1

The vacations of three out-of-town residents were marred by a three-car collision at the intersection of Morton Avenue and South Diamond shortly before 11 a.m. Saturday—the thirteenth reportable accident since Jan. 1 at that intersection.

Reports show that a car driven by Charlene Junes, Savanah, Mo., an auto driven by Gary V. Thompson of Hillard, Ohio, and a car driven by Claude Dambacher of Divernon, collided at the intersection.

All three cars were heading west on Morton at the time of the mishap. The Junes and Thompson autos were stopped at the Morton-Diamond signal light. The Dambacher auto crashed into the rear of the Thompson auto, which in turn, struck the Junes car. All three cars were damaged in the collision.

Dambacher told police he did not see the signal lights.

The signal lights have been the subject of editorials, letters to the State highway department and numerous inquiries by city officials in an effort to initiate corrective action. The highway department replaced the light bulbs in the present signals last week.

Sgt. Ernest Smith and patrolman Cloyd Wilson attended at the scene of the accident.

Its habit of perching hawklike on a limb before swooping down on its prey earned the hawk owl its name.

KIWANIS CLUB VIEWS CONSERVATION MEASURES AT FARM MEETING

Jacksonville Kiwanis Club members received a first-hand view of the latest measures used in soil and water conservation Thursday at the Hobart Rigg farm, west of the city.

The meeting was under the direction of Ted Pierce, soil conservationist, and George Trull, county farm adviser.

The meeting was preceded by the regular noon luncheon as Jacksonville businessmen found a shade tree and sat down for lunch. The meal was served by Floyd Sorrill and the Kiwanians, many their first time on the farm, ate just a breath away from basking sheep, beef cattle and hogs. About 75 members and guests were present for the open-air meeting.

In the photo above, George Trull points to markers showing 2.4 acres—the amount of crop area for each person of the United States. The group stands before a modern-type farm pond on the Rigg farm. The clover in the foreground holds silt on the watershed area.

At one point on the Rigg farm, Mr. Pierce pointed out conservation controls in operation: water control in the form of a pond, which provides erosion control, livestock water and recreation; gully control, crop rotation and grass waterways.

The meeting appeared to be a successful venture as city dwellers observed and learned the purpose of water and soil conservation on a first-hand basis. Club officials plan other meetings of a similar nature in the future.

Minimum-Tillage Corn Taking Dry Weather Well

URBANA— Early plantings of minimum-tillage corn at the University of Illinois are withstanding recent dry weather as well as corn planted by conventional methods, according to Paul Bateman, U. of I. agricultural engineer. Late plantings are not doing as well.

Both minimum-tillage and conventionally planted soils are showing the effects of dry weather. But minimum-tillage soils are looser and show considerably less cracking. They also contain a little more moisture.

U. of I. Agricultural engineers took moisture samples at depths down to 55 inches. At 55 inches both plantings showed sufficient moisture to keep the corn supplied with water.

But the critical depth, especially when corn is tasseling and making ears, is only about three feet. Upper-level roots, which supply the plant with nutrients, cannot do their job without moisture.

Although both plantings lack sufficient moisture at this critical three-foot level, minimum-tillage plantings show more moisture than conventional plantings.

The fact that minimum-tillage corn planted on June 1 is not doing as well as early June conventional plantings strengthens the belief that, for best results, minimum-tillage fields should be planted early in the season.

USDA Announces 1960 Soil Bank Program

The U. S. Department of Agriculture recently announced plans for the Conservation Reserve of the Soil Bank for the 1960 crop season. This will be the fifth year of the Conservation Reserve program, under which farmers contract to withdraw general cropland from production and protect it with conservation uses for a period of 3 to 10 years.

The 1960 Conservation Reserve will be similar to the 1959 program. Principal changes have been made in regulations relating to publicly owned land, tenure of ownership, the method of setting payment rates, and the determination of priorities when more applications are received than can be accepted.

Detailed information as to the application of these and other changes to individual farm situations will not be available in county ASC offices until mid-August, since time is required to instruct State and county office personnel in the new program.

The basic national per-acre rate of payment for 1960 will be $13.50, the same as for 1959. The acreage goal is approximately 5 million acres of land to be put in the program under contracts beginning with 1960 crops. This is the estimated maximum additional acreage that can be accommodated under the $375 million annual program authorized by Congress for 1960. This compares with approximately 13 million new acres placed under contract in 1959.

Approximately 10 million acres will also remain under Conservation Reserve contracts in 1960 from years previous to 1959. If farmers contract for the expected 5 million new acres in 1960, the total acreage in the program next year will be approximately 28 million acres.

The principal Conservation Reserve changes for next year will be as follows:

1. Land owned by a state, county, town, or local government will be ineligible for the program —a rule which is already in effect for Federal land.

2. Land which has changed ownership (except through inheritance) since Dec. 31, 1956, is ineligible to enter the program in 1960.

3. If land under a 1960 Conservation Reserve contract is sold, the contract generally may be assumed by the purchaser only after it has been in effect for 3 years.

4. The priority system of accepting applications has been modified to assure first consideration to farmers who were unable to participate in the 1959 program because of lack of funds.

As in 1959, the 1960 Conservation Reserve will be conducted on an offer-and-acceptance basis. Under this plan, the farmer will request that a basic annual per-acre rate be established for his farm, indicating whether he plans to place part or all of his eligible cropland in the program.

Forms for farmers to use in requesting rate determinations for their farms will be available from county ASC offices about the middle of August. The period for filing such requests will be Aug. 24-Sept. 10.

In setting the basic annual per-acre rate for land offered, the county committee will take into consideration the productivity of the land and the rate will be limited to the local fair rental value of the land based on crops harvested during the past 5 years. When all eligible cropland on the farm is to be retired, the rate will generally be set 10 percent higher than the rate for only part of the eligible land.

After the basic rate has been determined, the farmer may apply for a contract at any figure below the basic rate established for the land offered in the request for rates. In some cases where acceptance of all applications would exhaust available funds in a county or where more land is offered than it would be desirable to retire in one year, the priority system will be used to determine which offers are accepted.

As provided in the 1960 Agriculture Appropriation Act, first consideration will go to farmers who applied but could not be offered contracts in the 1959 program because of shortage of funds. Such a farmer will be offered a contract at the basic rate for his land reduced by the average amount of reduction for all offers received in the county. If he is not willing to accept such terms, his application will be considered on the regular basis along with other applications received.

After this initial group, priority will be given to the farmer offering land at the lowest rate compared with the basic rate established for his land. Each offer will be computed as a percentage of the basic rate for the land offered and acceptance will begin with the lowest percentage offer.

For most farms, placing land under contract will require a corresponding acreage reduction in Soil Bank base crops (grains, oilseeds, and row crops.) In addition, acreage may be placed under contract which does not require a reduction of Soil Bank base crops. This land is called non-diversion acreage and the rate of payment will be 50 percent of the regular payment rate approved for the contract.

The per-acre rates apply to annual payments which are earned each year a Conservation Reserve contract is in effect. In addition, a farmer can get a cost-share payment to assist in establishing approved conservation uses on his Conservation Reserve land.

The Conservation Reserve program began late in the 1956 crop year under the original Soil Bank legislation. The present authorization for placing land under a Conservation Reserve contract expires on Dec. 31, 1960.

The basic rate for the State of Illinois is $19.00 and the tentative goal is 128,000 acres. The rates are unchanged from 1959. The goals are subject to consideration and recommended by State ASC Committees.

DIVIDEND DECLARED

Farmers in Menard, Morgan, Sangamon, Scott, and Cass counties have received checks totaling $12,074. as dividends on their stock in the National Farm Loan Association of Springfield, according to an announcement made today by Donald R. Brown, secretary-treasurer.

The dividend of 5 per cent was declared by the board of directors of the association at its last meeting, payable to its member-stockholders of record at the close of business on May 31, 1959.

KIWANIS CLUB CHOW TIME brings a variety of business and professional men to the Hobart Rigg farm to observe water and soil conservation practices. The meeting was held near the Rigg pond west of the city.

Supply Dangerously Low; Bloodmobile Will Visit Next Tuesday, Wednesday

The blood supply in the St. Louis area, American Red Cross, has become dangerously low according to a recent communication received at the Morgan County Red Cross Chapter. For some reason, possibly apathy, donors are not responding to local visits in the area.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will visit Jacksonville Tuesday and Wednesday, July 28 and 29, stationed at the Masonic Temple. The communication received at the local chapter office is considered of such importance it is reprinted here as an alert to Morgan residents of the value in having available Red Cross blood when it is needed:

Mrs. Betty L. Houston
Executive Secretary
American Red Cross
Morgan County Chapter
Jacksonville, Ill.
Dear Betty:

Will you please give this letter your immediate attention. Our blood supply is critically low.

We expect a drop off in summer collections, but this year is all out of proportion to what is normal.

Let me take time to tell you of the child hospitalized in Vandalia, Ill.: He was caught in a mechanical device used for feeding stock. He was bleeding from severed internal vessels and it appeared he was dying. Blood, AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY, was started in his leg and arm before any surgery could be attempted. The child is all right now, but only because the BLOOD WAS ON HAND.

We are unable today, because of the shortage, to send blood for hospitals to stock their shelves in a quantity sufficient to be safe for their needs. This is a bad reflection on the Red Cross Blood Program and its responsibility to the people.

Won't you please pass this on to your Blood Program Committee and urge them to do all possible to make the bloodmobile visit coming a success. Our remaining July and all August bloodmobiles MUST produce at least 150 units if we are to avoid a continuance of this situation.

It takes only 45 minutes of a donor's time to make our blood supply safe for our hospitals. I am sure if your donors realize this they will come through for you. It is up to you and your Blood Program Committee to see this information gets to ALL people in your chapter. We have a responsibility we must accept. Let's get the job done NOW.

Sincerely yours,
Floria Oberstein

Fast-Gaining Bulls Sire Fast-Gaining Calves

URBANA—Recent feeding trials have shown that fast-gaining bulls sire fast-gaining calves.

These trials are proof of the value of performance-testing beef cattle, reports G. R. Carlisle, University of Illinois extension livestock specialist.

Fast-gaining bulls also require less feed per 100 pounds of gain. And they pass this ability along to their offspring.

Carlisle cites a recent Kansas Experiment Station feeding trial in which three different bulls, a slow gainer, a medium gainer, and a fast gainer, were bred to three groups of cows of similar age, weight and type. Calves sired by each bull were fed for 232 days after weaning.

Calves sired by the fast-gaining bull not only gained 62 more pounds than those sired by the slow-gainer, but did it on 94 pounds less feed. Medium-gaining calves outweighed the slow gainers by 30 pounds and required 61 pounds less feed.

Cattlemen desiring more information about performance-testing beef cattle should contact their farm adviser or write to Carlisle at 326 Mumford Hall, Urbana, Illinois.

With Illinois pastures showing the effects of dry weather, dairy herds will need additional feed and a higher level of protein to maintain present production levels. To be fully effective, supplemental feeding should be started before production begins to fall, advise University of Illinois dairy specialists.

Dairy cattle make efficient use of high-moisture corn. But it is not superior in feeding value to regular corn, according to University of Illinois dairy scientists.

Horn flies may be easily controlled by providing a back rubber for cattle.

Hearing Set On Proposed Federal Milk Regulation For Central Illinois

Bringing the handling of milk in the Central Illinois marketing area under Federal regulation will be the subject of a hearing at Bloomington, Ill., beginning Aug. 25, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced today.

The hearing will open at 10 a.m. in the Illinois Hotel, 207 West Jefferson Street. The proposed marketing order would establish minimum prices to be paid by handlers to the producers who supply milk distributed in the marketing area. It would not regulate retail prices.

The order, as proposed by the Pure Milk Association, of Chicago, would include 40 counties, including Morgan, all within the State of Illinois. Interested handlers have proposed the inclusion of 11 additional Illinois counties.

Under the proposed order, handlers would be charged for milk according to the use made of it. Class I would be all milk and cream distributed in fluid form, and Class II would be milk and cream used for manufactured dairy products. Payments due from all handlers for both classes would be pooled and paid out to producers at a uniform or "blend" price per hundredweight. This arrangement is known as a market-wide pool.

Three districts for Class I pricing purposes are proposed. Plants located in the lowest pricing district would pay a basic formula price plus an annual average differential of $1.10 per hundredweight for Class I milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. The Class I practices applicable to plants in the two remaining districts would be 6 and 12 cents higher, respectively.

The proposed marketwide pool would include any distributing plant disposing of at least 25 percent of its total Class I milk on routes within the marketing area; and any supply plant or reload point which ships to distributing plants at least 50 per cent of its producer receipts during August through January, and 25 percent during February through July.

Evidence presented at the Aug. 11 hearing on the proposal for a Central Illinois Federal milk marketing order will be considered by USDA in drawing up a recommended decision, which, if issued, would be submitted to producers and handlers for exceptions.

After a final decision by USDA, the proposed marketing order would be subject to approval by at least two-thirds of the producers supplying milk to the Central Illinois area.

Illinois farmers' records show that beef and dairy herds and feeder cattle, hog and poultry enterprises returned more income in 1958 than in 1957. Only sheep flocks returned less income.

Vision Fulfilled

Many devoted and unselfish persons shared in the plans, financing and construction of the fine new addition to Our Saviour's Hospital which is being dedicated today. But no single individual deserves more credit for the successful completion of the program than the eminent physician and surgeon for whom the new wing is named, Dr. Frank A. Norris.

Several years ago his colleagues of the medical profession honored "Dr. F.A.," as he is familiarly known, on the 50th anniversary of his practice for his outstanding service as a doctor.

Today the community and people from a wide area honor him as a man of vision and philanthropy.

They also honor the Sisters of the Holy Cross, the Catholic order under whose sacrificial auspices Our Saviour's Hospital is operated. The order itself raised more than half of the funds required to build the new wing and to make necessary improvements in the older part of the structure which was built in 1922.

The Jacksonville area takes great pride in this fine new hospital facility as it expresses its gratitude and thanks to all who made it possible.

Butler As A Peacemaker

Party national chairmen usually are chosen for organizing abilities and a talent for harmonizing diverse views. More often than not, their public statements represent a kind of generalized happy talk aimed at calming troubled waters.

Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler seems increasingly to regard his role in a different light. He is trying to give his party a consistently more liberal stamp, in the belief that this may be necessary to victory in the presidential election of 1960.

Thus he assails the Democrats' moderate leadership in the House and Senate. He calls for strong civil rights action, knowing this could alienate the party's southern wing.

He even voices opinion on the qualifications of men for the presidency, stating flatly that he thinks a Roman Catholic (like Senator Kennedy of Massachusetts) would be sorely handicapped.

No one can question Butler's right to speak his piece. There may be some doubt, however, as to just how useful this makes him as a "harmonizing" party official.

Most Democrats, on performance, are moderates. The South still bulks large. Kennedy now leads his party's presidential pack, and might be the winner.

Where does all this leave Butler as a national chairman?

Name In Lights

Not since the ever-blooming Harold Stassen tossed in his presidential hat in mid-1947 for the 1948 race has a candidate come into the open so early as Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota has now done for the 1960 Democratic nomination.

Originally the senator said he would make his intentions known this summer, but later he indicated he might follow the more common practice and defer an announcement until late fall or early winter.

Thus the word that his two key Minnesota colleagues, Sen. Eugene McCarthy and Gov. Orville Freeman, are heading a Humphrey-for-President movement comes as a mild surprise.

The tendency of most men to put off declaring themselves is often ascribed to "coyness." Actually the reasons are thoroughly practical.

Aspiring politicians greatly fear both that they will grow stale and that they may bore the voters if too early.

They also find it a personal handicap to have their every action judged for its political meaning and content for so many, many months.

Some may argue that known presidential aspirants suffer these difficulties whether they are avowed or not. But most politicians do not believe it.

At least they do not think the problems are as acute if they stay unannounced.

Humphrey and his advisers obviously had good practical reasons for putting his name up in lights so soon. We can only guess at them.

The one which comes most readily to mind as plausible is the fact that of all the major candidates mentioned for the Democratic nomination, Humphrey has the steepest uphill fight.

For all the attention he has gained as result of his famed marathon talk with Soviet Premier Khrushchev, for all his accepted importance as an influential member of the Senate, he is still relatively little known. Polls show him lagging far behind most of the 1960 bidders.

If Humphrey is to have a real chance to make it, he needs more time than most for building himself up. He has nothing to gain and much to lose from hiding his light under a bushel.

So the bushel basket has been cast aside, and the 1960 contest is formally on its way.

In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Richard Long, who has had more than his share of bad breaks, is getting a good one—as star of one of TV's promising shows for the fall.

Dick started as a kid actor, then had his career disrupted by military service. His first marriage to Suzan Ball ended with her death by cancer. His second marriage to Mara Corday has had its stormy seasons, though it appears calm at present.

His career never seemed to spark possibly because he is handsome, clean-cut, well-groomed and not the least neurotic. Doesn't even wear blue jeans.

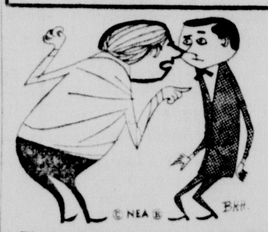

"When I was under contract to Universal-International, I couldn't seem to get any kind of role but the boy next door or Madison Avenue types," he recalled.

But he made a good impression as a suave gambler on the Maverick series. This led to his selection as lead in the new Warners whodunit, "Bourbon Street Beat." He and Andrew Duggan played partners in a New Orleans detective agency.

"But it's a different kind of detective series because of the locale," Dick pointed out. "We don't have to find a dead body in each chapter. There are all kinds of possibilities in the territory, even finding buried treasure."

"Bourbon Street Beat" will be the center of ABC's powerhouse trio aimed at dominance of Monday nights. It will be preceded by a Western, "Cheyenne" and followed by the South Sea series, "Adventures in Paradise."

Anonymous Speaker Calls 'Shot' on Soviet Rivalry; Washingtonians Report Fewer Flying Saucers

NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON —(NEA)— One prominent speaker—who shall be nameless—at a Defense Department sponsored briefing the other day insisted the United States has nothing to worry about in its military and economic competition with the Soviet Union.

"The nation that invented bourbon whisky is not going to be outdone by any Soviet scientific advances," he insisted. He was cheered by his military audience, including the teetotalers.

REP. CRAIG HOSMER (R-Calif.) asked for permission the other day to extend his remarks in the minutes. That is, he wanted to have one of his speeches—not given on the floor of the House—printed in the back of the Congressional Record.

As is usual, permission was granted. Here is Craig Hosmer's speech in full:

"Stop Flops Drop Crop Props."

Explains Hosmer, "That's all I had to say."

POSTMASTER General Arthur Summerfield has what he calls a "Chamber of Horrors" in one of his private offices. He has—behind drapes and locked doors—a collection of some of the nude pictures that go through the mails these days.

Summerfield takes selected Congressmen back to the room, uses his "horror" exhibit of nude pictures and other "trash" to convince the legislators they've got to pass some sort of a bill to put a stop to the business.

P.S: As a clincher, the postmaster general will show a select movie—sent through the mails—to a reluctant Congressman. "After seeing that movie," says one visitor, "I was ready to vote whatever Art wanted to get this sort of thing out of circulation."

A MILITARY attache from a friendly European power stationed here in town wonders what all the excitement is about in China.

He says the Communists on the mainland insist they want Formosa. The Chinese Nationalists on Formosa insist they want the mainland.

"Why not just trade," says the officer, known among his friends as a precise thinker.

NEWEST CASUALTY of the space age: Washiontonians are reporting fewer and fewer "flying saucers." So are Americans generally.

In fact the Air Force reports that in the past six months, only 143 Americans reported seeing these mysterious "interplanetary" or "interstellar" space ships. That's a big comedown from the 208 reported the previous half year.

It turned out that 5 per cent of the space ships were balloons and 45 per cent stars.

The Air Force, however, doesn't explain 20 per cent—says there were insufficient data. Some Washingtonians are sure that at least some of these were actual ships from some place in space. The Air Force is just as certain some of these were birds, some searchlights, some hoaxes, and none space ships.

MONKEYS ARE a big bone of contention these days between Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.) and the Defense Department.

Moss contends everybody ought to know about the monkeys the Department is using in space research. Defense says giving out this information would be against the national defense—would aid communism—and injure U. S. security.

Turns out that some kinds of monkeys are an object of worship by some peoples in other parts of the world. Departments of State and Defense don't want to hurt feelings or get some people angry. Hence the secrecy.

Moss is up in arms because he has found that the Soviets import monkeys regularly from India, make no secret about it.

P.S. When the U.S. did actually send some monkeys up in space recently—Able and Baker—officials made certain these were genuine American monkeys that would hurt no one's feelings.

RUSSIAN EMBASSY party-goers are distressed about a rumor that the Kremlin may order them to swear off betting at Maryland race tracks. Reason is that playing the horses has taken the Soviet Union by storm and is causing no end of trouble.

Typical example is that of a young party member who was caught picking pockets to cover his track losses. Another case involves a bookkeeper who snitched one million rubles from his boss's till to pay off a bookie.

It's reported that Kremlin brass are so incensed that they have denounced Commie bookies as "corrupters of youth and inducers of base feelings."

FAVORITE DISH at a recent Pakistan Embassy reception was a meat ball concoction originated by Press Secretary S. M. Haq.

The meat balls, which were about the size of marbles, were flavored with mint and ginger and served with a chili sauce dip.

Haq served them piping hot to guests from an electric broiler which he set up in an adjacent office.

Former Nurse, 84, Still Cares for Patients by Mail

BY MARIE DAERR

"I was in bed for 27 months with heart trouble," Mrs. Lena Porter, 84, told me. "One day, I read an item in the newspaper about a woman who had died in a state mental hospital.

"The hospital staff reported she did not receive a card, a letter or a visitor in the 18 years she had been a patient there.

"I felt ashamed of myself."

This incident explains why Mrs. Porter, unable to do any strenuous cheer-up projects, writes weekly to four men, aged 57 to 75, in a mental hospital just outside the city in which she lives. She has been doing this for more than a year.

"Only two can answer me," said Mrs. Porter. "One calls me 'Dearest Mother' and signs his letter 'Your Son.'"

This man is a 63-year-old deaf-mute who helps out in the hospital kitchen.

"I really work hard at interpreting the letters," said Mrs. Porter. "But I'm thrilled to get them."

Mrs. Porter obtained her list of names from the hospital's medical secretary—who was surprised and delighted that some one was interested in writing to patients. Into each letter goes a stick of gum, a wrapped piece of candy, maybe a tiny Bible.

On two occasions, friends took Mrs. Porter to call on her pen pals.

"I was touched," Mrs. Porter said. "I took with me candy, oranges, cookies, cigars and cigarettes.

"At first, the men would not take them. They insisted they were 'not for me.' Finally, they accepted them.

"When I said goodbye after the first visit, one man who had sat with head bowed came up to me and touched me on the shoulder. 'You're a nice woman,' he told me."

A former nurse, Mrs. Porter worked for five years with patients in a private mental hospital.

"Maybe that's why I can do this now," she said. "At any rate, I feel I have been spared for this project.

"It is a small one, but I feel it is doing some good. I'm grateful that, at 84, I can undertake it."

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's good will Soviet visit has started off sticky and can get worse. If it does, President Eisenhower and the Senate will have to ask themselves if their timing was bad.

Nixon, whose gladhanding Latin-American tour a year ago was met with spit and stones, got a shocking reception Thursday just about the time he landed in Moscow and started shaking hands with all in sight.

Twenty miles away Premier Nikita Khrushchev, angered by a recent anti-Communist gesture of Eisenhower and the Senate, was deriding the United States and calling Nixon's visit part of a plan to embarrass the Soviet Union.

On July 6 the Senate, by voice vote and with little debate, passed a resolution calling on Eisenhower to proclaim the third week in every July as Captive Nations Week. Eisenhower issued the proclamation July 17.

This was the latest of many similar American reminders that the Soviet Union was holding the satellites in thralldom. It was supposed to serve several purposes:

To remind the satellite people the United States hasn't forgotten them; and to strengthen Secretary of State Christian A. Herter's hand in dealing with the Russians at Geneva on the Berlin problem.

How this could strengthen Herter's hand is hard to see. A Senate resolution on an old theme wasn't going to make the Russians weak-kneed. It was nothing more than a gesture.

And, since this country isn't going to war to free the satellites and there is no visible likelihood of their getting freedom otherwise, the only immediate result could have been expected: it irritated the Russians.

So, since Nixon's Soviet visit is billed as a good will tour whose climax is interviews with Khrushchev, the judgment behind the timing of this resolution and proclamation is open to question.

For this reason: When Nixon landed in Moscow it was in the middle of the Captive Nations Week as proclaimed by Eisenhower.

Khrushchev, who had just returned to Moscow himself from a trip to Poland about an hour before Nixon's plane touched down, hastened to address a Polish friendship meeting 20 miles from the Moscow airport.

He was in a savage mood. Whether this was due only to the proclamation or was part of a deliberately get-tough-with-America campaign he seems to building up is not clear. But the proclamation gave him a good excuse to strike at the United States just as Nixon arrived in the Soviet Union.

He told the crowd Nixon was a representative of the "panic-stricken American imperialists" and said Nixon's trip was deliberately timed to coincide with a campaign against the Soviet Union.

The Senate and the Eisenhower administration both might have anticipated that—by letting Captive Nations Week coincide with the week of Nixon's arrival in Moscow — they might be giving the Russians a chance to embarrass him. And the Russians chose to react just that way.

Any of the year's 52 weeks could just as easily have been designated Captive Nations Week. Why, then, was the choice made of the very week that Nixon went to Russia? The answer seems to be: thoughtlessness all around and not deliberate timing.

The resolution was offered by Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill), with Sen. Jacob K. Javits (NY) joining in.

Thursday night in the Senate Douglas was asked if the third week in July had been designated in his resolution so as to coincide with the arrival of Nixon in Moscow.

He said no, that the timing was "purely coincidental." Originally, he said, the resolution called for the week after the Fourth of July. This was changed, he said, after there was a delay in passing the resolution.

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

Minor Books of the Bible

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

A commonly accepted division between the Prophets of Israel has been between the major and minor prophets. The "four great major Prophets" are Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel; and the twelve minor Prophets are Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zacharia, and Malachi.

The distinction is somewhat confusing, and its basis is not clear. Three of the four major Prophets stand out by reason of their length, but in our English Bible at least two minor Prophets, Hosea and Zachariah, exceed the Book of Daniel in the number of chapters.

The distinction may have arisen from a sense of the importance and the impact upon Jewish life and history, but it is not justified as regards any implied inferiority of the minor as compared with the major in quality and truth, and in some respects in the significance and enduring expression that is in much that the minor Prophets declared.

No prophetic statement, for instance, has had greater prominence and permanent influence than Micah's famous definition of religion in Michah 6:8: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

And all the Prophesies, major and minor, contain nothing finer than the flaming words in which Amos, the herdsman, denounced the evils of the city, and lashed out against the lifeless ritualism of a much-exercised religion which neglected the matters of justice, righteousness, and truth.

Despite some questionable aspects of the division into major and minor Prophets, there might be some value in a suggested division between major and minor books of the Bible. It would not be a difference in quality, but in the significance for spiritual life.

Consider, for instance, the Old Testament books of Ruth and Esther, both intensely interesting and significant stories—the Book of Ruth of somewhat additional interest since the loyal, loving, and cleaving Moabitess is in the ancestry of Jesus; the Book of Esther, desperately asserting Jewish faith and courage in the face of a hostile Gentile world.

But if one had to make a choice, say, between the Books of Ruth and Esther on the one hand, and the Gospel of Luke on the other hand the Christian would not hesitate, though the Jew might well stand by the Old Testament books.

The point I am making is suggestive, but it applies to the minor and major aspect of portions in the Old Testament itself. The historical books of the Old Testament constitute a remarkable textbook in the things that exalt and the things that bring destruction.

Yet, in contrast with so much concerning down and fall, are the glorious chapters in Isaiah and in some of the Psalms that tell of a blessedness of nations that may be when righteousness and truth are the foundations.

This is the high peak in the Old Testament. The Jew puts his faith in the magnificent vision and still awaits the Messiah; the Christian thinks the Messiah has come, and finds the prophecies fulfilled in a new vision and hope.

All pages in the Bible are not upon the same level, some are minor and some are major, but there is not a single page or chapter that one would omit.

Soil Conservation Sign-Up Time Starts Here August 3

A new sign-up period for farmers desiring to carry out approved soil conservation practices under the Agricultural Conservation Program begins August 3, according to information from Mr. Wallace T. Hembrough, Office Manager of the Morgan County ASC Committee.

This should be of particular interest to farmers who need limestone and rock phosphate. August 3 is the first date by which sign-up is permitted for such materials to be used during the last five months of the year. All materials must be applied according to soil tests and must be used in connection with soil improving grasses and legumes.

Other important practices that are available include Sod-Waterways, Standard Terraces, Diversions, Tile Outlets, Contour Stripcropping, Legumes on Cropland, Green Manure Seedings, Tree Planting, Forest improvement, Tile Lines for Waterways, Removal of brush from Pastureland. Of this group preference is given to farmers desiring to install Farm Ponds, Small Structures., Erosion Control Structures and Dams. The Soil Conservation Service is cooperating in furnishing technical services on certain of these practices.

After August 14, requests for practices can be accepted only if funds therefore are available at the time.

All requests for cost-sharing assistance under the program must be filed at the county office located at 308 East State Street, Jacksonville, Illinois. A request must be on file before a practice is stated. Farmers interested in practices involving limestone or other materials should bring along their soil tests.

Lee Gard, Station soil and water researcher, probably made the understatement of the year when he said that low soil and water losses from corn planted with the mulch planter pleased him.

The mulch planter, sometimes called a till planter, is a once-over machine that prepares the seedbed, fertilizes and plants the corn. Instead of turning the sod or surface trash under, the mulch planter, by means of broad sweeps front-mounted on the tractor, merely cuts several inches under the surface of the sod, weeds or other vegetation. It leaves all trash on the surface. More thoroughly worked is a band eight to ten inches wide that becomes the row for planting corn with the rear-mounted planter.

Lee has been growing continuous corn on a nine per cent slope. He uses the mulch planter for part of the corn and the conventional system of planting as a check. Plot walls and collecting tanks are set up so that Lee may catch and measure the water and soil that washes off.

Last Year — Heavy Rainfall

Last year marked the fourth year of continuous corn. Measurements are to continue for six more years. Rainfall was heavier than average last year. More than 115 tons of water fell on each acre in July alone—that is over 16 inches of rainfall in one month! Considering this heavy rainfall and the fact that soil and water losses were measured the year round and not just during the growing months, we were surprised at the low loss from the mulch-planted corn plots. It averaged only about 300 pounds of soil per acre. But more than 50 times this much soil washed away from the plots that had been plowed, disked, harrowed and planted in the conventional way.

Less Water Runoff

During the year, rainfall totaled about 51 inches. On the conventionally planted corn, over one-third, or nearly 18 inches, of this water ran down the hills, carrying soil as it went. This is as much water as a 100-bushel corn crop takes! The mulch-planted corn plots gave up only about 10 per cent, or five inches, of the rainfall to runoff.

Reason for Understatement

Yields were similar for both corn-planting methods, or about 70 bushels an acre. Possibly Lee's mild statement that he was pleased with the low soil and water losses was tempered by the fact that the mulch planter is not a perfect piece of equipment. Because of its imperfections, it is impractical to use on a field scale.

WHICH DOLL IS REAL DOLL?—Who's kidding who is a puzzlement on both sides of the fence as Debbie Nicora and friend visit a children's park in Cleveland, Ohio. That's Debbie, 3, on the right. The little girl doll, at the left, is big as life. It takes a regular size dress for a three-year-old. The dolls are made of practically indestructible, easy-to-carry plastic.

Illinois Farmers Outlook Letter

Total 1959 crop production seems likely to fall at least 5 percent below the record high set last year. Growing conditions have not been so favorable as they were in 1958, although they have been better than average.

The oat and winter wheat crops are already in the bin. But the spring wheat, corn, soybean and cotton crops are just entering critical stages of development.

Crop prospects were good to excellent over most of Illinois on July 1. However, pastures in the broad belt across central Illinois already were suffering from dry weather. The drouth area ranged from about Kankakee and Charleston on the east to Quincy and St. Louis on the west. This drouth area also extended west and southwest across Missouri.

A much larger drouth area covered most of 10 southeastern states. Drouth also covered the northern plains—the Dakotas and eastern Montana. Still another drouth area spread over most of the five southwestern states from New Mexico to California.

General rains could save the crops in most of these areas, but our summer rainfall usually comes in thunder showers. Fortunately, most of the corn belt and adjoining areas were still in good shape on July 1, and some rains have been received this month. But late July and August are usually the "make or break" periods for corn and soybeans.

The 1959 wheat production was estimated at 1,155 million bushels, 21 percent less than the 1958 crop. The 1959 oat crop was estimated at 1,001 million bushels, or 30 percent less than last year. Barlye production was estimated at 414 million bushels, down 12 percent from the year before. Hay production was forecast at 110 million tons, down 10 percent.

Of the major feed crops, only corn was promised in more abundance than last year. The corn crop was forecast at 4½ billion bushels, 11 percent more than the record 1958 crop.

First official estimates of soybeans, sorghum grain and cotton will be made about Aug. 10.

The land planted to soybeans was estimated at 22 million acres, down 8 percent from 1958. Sorghum acreage was estimated at 18.8 million, 9 percent less than last year.

Total production of feed grains—corn, oats, sorghum and barley—"seems likely to fall slightly below last year despite the sharp increase in corn acreage," said the USDA Crop Reporting Board. This statement was based on July 1 conditions. Crop prospects, we believe, deteriorated during the first half of July.

Corn was consumed at a terrific rate during the April-June quarter. Disappearance from farms was estimated at 700 million bushels. This was 8 percent more than one year before—and a whopping 43 percent more than the 10-year average. (This high rate of disappearance strongly supports the view that lowering prices increases consumption.)

Corn-Soybean Crop Brightens After Moisture

The corn and soybean crop outlook in Jersey county varies in different districts of the county based on the amount of moisture received from time to time in the respective localities.

In some sections of western Jersey county, the outlook for corn crop is excellent. In other parts of the county where rain failed to fall at the same time that an inch and a half was recorded in some western Jersey localities, the outlook just now is for about a 50% yield.

The rain of last week which ranged from one-half inch to nine tenths of an inch in the county rejuvenated late planted corn and most soy beans.

Farmers reported, however, that another rain was needed as of Wednesday afternoon. Several localities received showers subsequent to the general precipitation, but such rainfall was strictly on a local basis.

Soy beans are blooming generally and podding at the present time. Late corn is reported tasseling and the average height of corn is around six feet tall.

As a result of the outlook for a corn crop, scores of Jersey county farmers have already reduced their prospective pig crop. Brood sows on many farms have been reduced to a minimum number, and the outlook for cattle on feed in the area during the coming fall and winter is for a smaller number than in many seasons.

General Ticket Study

By Joseph A. Smith

More Basic Theory

No doubt you are wondering "Why do we spend so much time with Basic Theory? "Well, an auto mechanic can't repair a car unless he knows just how the individual automobile parts go together and how each part works. Nor can a radio repairman (or amateur) intelligently repair a piece of electronic gear unless he knows what it is made up of, and how it too works.

Modern commercial gear, while it will hold up better than the older equipment of a few years back, will break down in time. If you fix your own gear you had better understand what makes it tick. In every case the How and Why reverts back to Basic Theory. So, while it may sometimes seem tiresome, it is none-the-less Most Important.

Don't expect that code speed to advance very rapidly. Above ten W.P.M. further speed increases come more slowly and only after Steady-Daily Practice! This practice must always be at a speed somewhat faster than is easy copy for you. This "pushing" yourself will, eventually, boost that speed up.

Study this week might proceed something like this: Mon: Practice "P.C.G." column 4 (downward) as before; Tues: Copy W1AW code practice sessions setn at 5 & 75 W.P.M.; Wed: Practice "P.C.G." column 5 (downward again); Thurs: Copy W1AW same as before, but make note of letters and punctuation that are still causing difficulty; Fri: Practice above characters until they are well in mind; Sat: Copy W1AW as before; then recheck for troublesome characters; compare with previous check.

Our Basic Theory might continue in this manner: (A.R.R.L. Handbook)—Mon: Chap. 2, PP 28 through 30—Down to "Time Constant"; Tues: Chap. 2, PP 30 through 32—Down to "Alternating currents"; Wed: Chap. 2, PP 32 through 34—Down to "Capacitated Reactance"; Thurs: Take a break! Plan a construction project for the station; a V.F.O., "Q-Multiplier," C.W. monitor, Conelrad monitor, or what have you; Fri: Chap. 2, PP 33 through 36—Read entire section about "Reactance"; Sat: Study General Exam questions numbers 33, 82, 83, 80, 71, 72, 76.

The Typewriter That Writes In Eskimo Language

By Mabel Hall Goltra

Have any of the young readers of the Junior page in the Jacksonville Journal-Courier heard of a new magazine for Eskimos? The first issue was published in June of this year.

The magazine is known as the Inuktitute (pronounced Eenooktetoot) which means The Eskimo Way. It was published in the East Arctic dialect entirely by Eskimos but made under the authority of Alvin Hamilton, Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources. The magazine uses the primitive syllables of the Eskimo language.

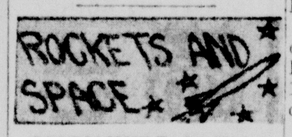

Has Children's Page

An Eskimo typewriter has been manufactured for this language, and this first issue contains an Eskimo's account of a good will mission last year by a group of East Arctic Eskimos visiting Greenland Eskimos. There is also a children's page in the magazine.

The magazine is illustrated by the art editor, Mary Panegoosho, who also designed the cover. Mr. Hamilton said "this is a great step forward in the preservation and development of the Eskimo culture. Now the Eskimo will have their own publication as an outlet for their creative talents. It may well become a contribution to Canadian culture as a whole."

The new magazine will encourage artistic and literary endeavor by the Eskimos. One feature is a drawing by Tomosiapik, an 18-year old Eskimo boy showing two Eskimos dressed in their native costume.

The Eskimos seem to be the healthiest and happiest people in the world.

MOON-WIDE RADIO

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

Radio waves could not be sent beyond the horizon on the moon by reflecting them off the Ionosphere the way we do on earth because the moon has no Ionosphere, (at least not enough for this purpose).

But there are five other ways radio messages could be sent over long distances on the moon: 1, bouncing them off earth; 2, relaying them through a satellite near earth; 3, a satellite of the moon; 4, relay towers on the moon and 5, a satellite of earth that always stays the same distance from the moon.

Bouncing radio waves off the earth would take more power than most portable radio transmitters could carry. The moon base, of course, would have enough power to send messages to exploring parties this way, but they wouldn't be able to answer back. A one-way conversation like this would be more useful if the exploring party could talk to the moon base only, instead of it being the other way around.

Relaying messages from space stations near earth would take half as much power as bouncing off the earth because the station could supply the power for re-broadcasting. Though all space ships would carry a powerful radio to reach a satellite near earth the power would still be too much for a moon car radio to handle.

Moons Too Fast

Besides that, satellites near earth would travel too fast to be efficient relays between places on the moon. The same thing would be true of a satellite of the moon which was in an orbit close enough to that body to keep it from being pulled out of its orbit by earth's gravity.

Relay towers could be built on the moon which would be able to relay messages from low powered radio transmitters, but they would cost too much to be setup and just used once or twice by a few men. The cost of the relay towers would be increased because four would be needed to cover the same amount of distance on the moon as two do on earth. This is because the horizon is four times as close on the moon as on earth due to the moon's smaller size.

Satellites of earth that stay the same distance from the same spot on the moon all the time would make the best radio relays. There are four sites for such relays. We'll tell you about the Four Moon Radio Relays next time.

We went to Springfield to play
But teacher made us work all day!
We bought us some squirt guns
To have a little fun,
But when we squirted the teacher
We really had to run!
After that there was at the store handy
Some sticks of sugar candy.
After we got out of the store,
We were tempted to go back for more.

BIRTHDAY PARADE

MANY MARCHERS

We have a long line of Birthday Boys and Girls waiting to march today so, somebody beat the drums and away we'll go—

Steven Edward Williams hasn't long to wait to blow out those three candles on his cake July 28. He looks pretty happy about it naturally.

Steve is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Williams of Evanston and is the big brother of one-year-old sister Kim. Steve's grandparents are Mrs. Alma Kitson of 125 Diamond Court and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williams of Concord.

Dennis Jay Lindsey will celebrate his very first birthday July 28 and his big brother Raymond Dean Lindsey won't have to wait many more days after that for that big 3-year-old birthday August 1.

These two boys, with the fine matching smiles, are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Lindsey of Murrayville.

Now here is David Phillips enjoying gay memories of July 22 when he celebrated his 4th birthday with lots of yummy homemade ice cream and a big cake on which glowed 4 Birthday candles.

David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Phillips of Murrayville.

Just yesterday, July 25, Sandra Jane DeLong was a whole 4 years old. This pretty miss is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lindell DeLong of Waverly.

Sandra Jane's grandparents are Mrs. Lola DeLong of Waverly and Clarence Reynolds of Jacksonville.

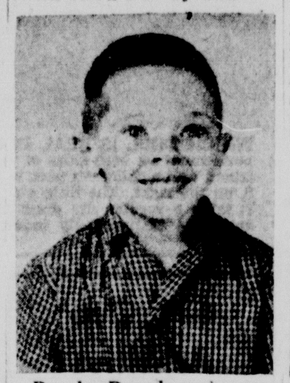

Edith Vera Allan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allan of Franklin, is celebrating her third Birthday right today, July 26! Edith, in her gay printed frock, finds the prospect of being a whole 3 years old something to be just a wee bit serious about.

Lake Champlain, which covers an area of 600 square miles, is mostly in New York and Vermont. But, it extends about six miles into Canadian territory of the Province of Quebec.

Also having Birthday right today, July 26 are twins Reva Dawdy and—

Randy Dawdy who are now 6 years old. They are doing their marching from a distance today since they are vacationing in the Ozarks.

Also enjoying the Ozark holiday are twins Reva and Randy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Dawdy of White Hall, brother Larry and sisters Judi and Jerry.

Reva and Randy attended kindergarten last year and will enter the first grade this fall. Their grandmothers, Mrs. Elma Dawdy and Mrs. Mildred Wilkinson live at Patterson.

Dennis (Denny) Day, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Day of 448 Pine St., comes along now to conclude this week's parade. Denny will be 2 years old tomorrow, July 27.

LITTLE SNOW CHIEF

By Mary Pence Claywell

Part 7: Learns Words

I also learned there was a great difference between the meaning of words, and two of these words were "kill," and "hold:"

I "killed" a rat . . . but I would "hold" a chicken when Mistress wanted me to catch one. I would chase it into a corner, and then I would hold it down with my front paws until she could get a hold on it. I didn't bite or wool it around for I knew we were going to have chicken for dinner.

Actually, I have almost lived my full life of fifteen years at this very point; and I am growing old . . . almost one hundred fifty years, as man figures a dog's age in comparison to his. It is said that each year of our lives is equal to ten years of man's. Some say only seven, and now that we dogs don't work treadmills perhaps we do live longer.

I feel that every year of my life has been good; and too, I believe that I have been a good and useful dog. But now I have grown rather stiff and I don't run and play as I used to.

Growing Old

I lie around and sleep a great deal of the time but Mistress still gives me a bath now and then and brushes and combs my snow-white hair. She always feeds and waters me, and when it is too hard for me to get up and down the steps, she or Master carry me out into the pretty sunshine and I lie in my pen and rest.

The other day, Mistress was walking me out on the lawn and we stopped to rest under a pretty green tree near the back gate. She seemed sad, and from habit bent, I nosed her hand and she reached down and patted my head ever so gently.

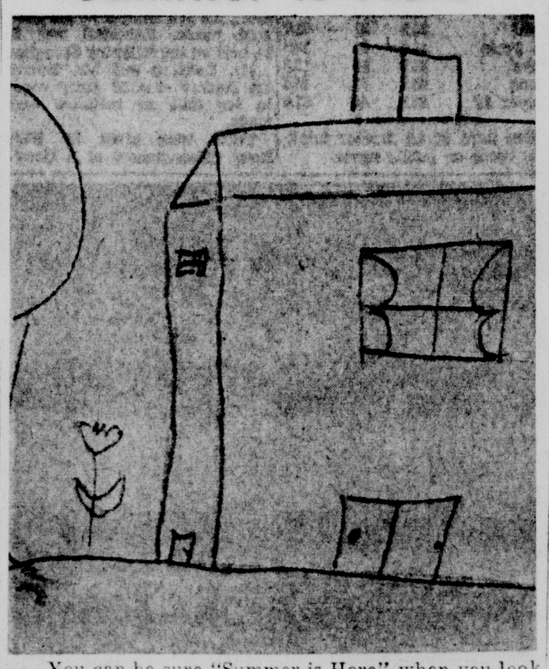

I feel, in her "secret chamber" . . . she was selecting my final resting place . . . and now, dear children, the "pen" will have to finish the last chapter of my life, for I am very sleepy . . . and the sun is sinking low.

Too, I see a new puppy has come to our house to live, but he has never been allowed to bother me . . . except once or twice, he has tweaked my tail, which is a little straggley-looking now . . . but Mistress just says sternly, "Leave Snow Chief alone, Penny!" and he does.

Under a great green spreading tree,
Where the violets bloom and the grasses wave,
Beneath a mound . . . a rock-marked spot . . .
A little white dog . . . sleeps the years away;
Useful and happy, a true tried friend . . .
Loyal and obedient for fifteen years . . .
He was laid to rest by his Mistress' hand,
With a loving thought . . . and a few warm tears;
While "Penny" softly licked her hand,
As if to say, "Come romp with me . . .
"Come, Mistress, come . . . let us haste away,
A squirrel is barking . . . in yonder's tree!"

(the end)

Summer Is Here

You can be sure "Summer is Here" when you look out the window and see a flower as Marilyn Jean Noe, age 8, of Virginia, did when she drew this interesting picture.

More drawings next Sunday so keep watching for yours and for those of your friends.

Mouse Plays Tennis

Patty Busche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Busche of 327 Finley, drew this "Tennis Mousie", showing how well she draws animals and her sense of fun too.

Patty may come in any time now for her JUNIOR JOURNALIST PENCIL and JUNIOR PRESS CARD which all earn who have anything printed on the Junior page.

Brave Little Rebel

By Loella Sloane Young

Chapter 17: Riderless Horse

From their haven of safety under the ledge, the children waited for the horse, they had heard and feared, to come into view.

"Why," exclaimed Simon in surprise, "that's Lone Star, John Boley's horse! He must have broken away from the Indians and come back here looking for John. Look, Emmy Lou," he pointed, "He's dragging his bridle reins."

Lone Star walked to the edge of the creek, and began to sip the clear cool water. As Simon had noticed, he wore a bridle, but the reins were dragging on the ground.

He wore no saddle. Evidently he had been running at top speed for a long distance, as his lovely coat glistened with sweat.

Cautiously, so as not to frighten the animal, Simon began to walk toward the horse. Alerted by the sound of footsteps, Lone Star threw his head up, listening.

He whipped his body around to face Simon, tossing his mane and pawing the ground restlessly. Simon stopped, waiting for Lone Star to recognize the boy who had so often given him an apple or lump of sugar.

Must Catch Horse

"Here, Lone Star!" Simon called softly, holding out his hand toward the wary beast. "Here, boy! Quiet now," he spoke soothingly, "I've just got to catch him," thought Simon. "If I can just get close enough to him to grab the reins."

Lone Star stared at the boy, his eyes betraying his wariness. He switched his long flowing tail, and tossed his head nervously. Was this the boy who had so many times rubbed his soft brown nose, and who had given him sugar and apples, or was it another of those strange smelling men who beat their heels into his sides and unmercifully whipped his flanks for added speed?

Slowly Simon advanced toward the horse, realizing all the time that their very lives might depend on his being able to catch this steed. Several times, Simon was forced to pause, as he thought Lone Star was about to turn and dash away from him. At last the lovely animal snorted in recognition and began to move toward Simon, touching his soft muzzle against the boy's cheek.

'I Caught Him!'

"There boy, steady boy," soothed Simon, reaching for the dragging reins. "I've got him," he cried victoriously. "I caught him, Emmy Lou! Now we can ride Lone Star to the fort!"

Quickly Emmy Lou scrambled from beneath the ledge, and hurried over to where Simon stood holding the horse's bridle. "You were so brave, Simon," she exclaimed in admiration.

Simon led the horse alongside a large boulder lying near the creek. Still holding Lone Star's reins, he climbed upon it, and threw his leg over the steed's back. Lone Star danced nervously for a few minutes, but Simon patted his neck reassuringly, and he soon quieted.

"Now," he ordered Emmy Lou, "you come climb on behind me."

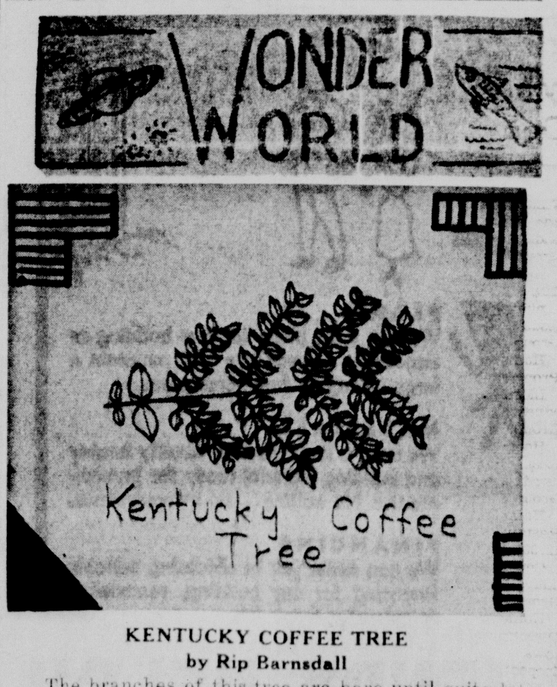

She glanced down at her soiled gown. "Oh, Simon, I can't go to the fort looking like this," she complained. "I don't even have any other clothes to put on, before we start."

"That's too bad," Simon sympathized. "But it can't be helped. Come on, try to climb on behind me," he urged.

Emmy Lou lifted her gown above her knees, and climbed up to the boulder as she had seen Simon do. She took a firm grasp of Simon's belt, and struggled into position behind him.

"Hold on tight," he warned. Gently he touched his heels to Lone Star's ribs, and the beast began to move westward.

KENTUCKY COFFEE TREE

by Rip Barnsdall

The branches of this tree are bare until quite late in the spring, and the leaves fall off early in autumn. The leaves often get up to three feet in length.

The Kentucky Coffee Tree has very large pods that blacken with age. The early settlers in Kentucky found up the seeds to make a substitute for coffee.

South's two spade overcall is an example of a weakness of many rubber bridge players. Of course, he knew he was taking a chance but he did not want to give up the rubber without a struggle and he did have a good six card suit and a side ace.

West doubled and opened the three of clubs. East won with the king and played the diamond queen.

South took his ace and led a club. East was in again and played his spade. South's ten lost to West's queen and West cashed the trump ace while East signaled with the seven of hearts.

Now West played the king of diamonds and ace and ten of hearts. South did not cover in dummy but East played the king anyway and cashed the ten of clubs.

South was now down three tricks and East led a fourth club. This play established West's nine of trumps as another trick since if South trumped high West would simply discard. South had paid 1100 points for the luxury of an overcall.

HERE'S FASHION FORECAST FOR FALL '59

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Coats Feature Every Furry Pelt

There's a feeling of opulence and elegance in the new fall fashions. It's shown here in coats both with and without fur trim. Black-and-white striped tweed coat (left) by Monte-Sano and Pruzan has half-belt at back to control fullness. Front is cut with wide, open dropped collar. Beautiful and luxurious coat (center) in honey-beige cashmere has enormous collar and tuxedo front of river otter. This is a wrap coat which is neither bulky nor heavy. It's an Originala design. Straight double-breasted coat (right) in oatmeal tweed is by George Carmel. It's cut with high, wide notched collar and half-belt at the back for slight shaping. All three of these coats are designed to go easily over suits.

BY GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—There's a look of opulence and elegance in fall coats for 1959. Some of this look derives from the lavish use of fur trim but even the untrimmed fabric coats have an air.

This air of luxury is expressed in three important silhouettes: the loosely belted coat, the full coat and the straight coat with wide shoulders and big notched collar of fur or fabric.

Fur of every kind is used for collars, for linings, for ascots and gilets. There is mink, as always, but there are also fox, beaver, leopard, Alaska fur seal, chinchilla, sable and fisher.

The ascot is offered as one way to have fur trim or not, just as you like. It fills in a deep coat neckline and when it's removed, a necklace or scarf can be substituted.

Less lavish furs are reserved for fur linings. Here, muskrat, lapin and even hamster are used as contrast for coats in brilliant colors. The effect is dramatic but not overpowering.

Fur linings are used in a new way: as linings for silk or satin evening coats, they provide warmth as well as beauty and make it possible for the evening coat to be worn even in bitter weather.

The double-breasted overcoat with notched fur collar is reminiscent of the Edwardian era when men wore just such coats. But for 1959, it has been translated into a definitely feminine and wearable version.

Belted, this fall, means a loose half-belt at back or a regular belt or tie. But the half-belt is at a normal waistline rather than either high or very low, as in seasons past.

As I See It

by E. W. BROWN

A Midwest medic claims that one of the greatest things in the world is controlled laziness. Apart from washing elephants, most of the big things have been accomplished by folks who were constructively lazy. They were constantly looking for an easier way of doing things . . . and their hide-and-go-seek with hard work has been a boon to us all. That goes for inventors of elevators, washing machines, snap-on bow ties, telephones, whistling teakettles and handles on hot pans. Most progress has been paced by lethargic lads who didn't want to do it the hard way. And it sure is a wonderful alibi.

A 13 year old Omaha boy told to make a list of practices important to dental hygiene, wrote: 1) "Brush your teeth after every meal" 2) "See your dentist twice a year" 3) "Stay away from fountains where they push." That's a practical boy. And the most practical way to buy a used car is to buy from a new car dealer in whom you have confidence. We get rid of lemon trade-ins via the wholesale route, go look them, and we don't depend on our used car department to pay an agency operating expenses. TODAY'S 2-MINUTE MYSTERY

THE CASE OF THE FORGETFUL SHERIFF

By Donald J. Sobol

Haledjian dismounted from his little burro and limped after the other dudes bent upon corralling some western color.

The tour's grizzled little guide brought them to a pocket formed by high boulders. He motioned for silence.

"Now this here spot is called Outlaw Cemetery, on account of the five desperadoes laid under in '75.

"Them outlaws held up the bank at River Falls and got off with $12,000 in gold. The sheriff set out after 'em, but bein' new on the job, forgets to buckle on his shootin' irons.

"So a posse rides after the sheriff, seein' as he might need help. About a mile out town, they hear gun play. When it stops, they ride up to this here spot. Stretched out dead as fish in a barrel is them five outlaws.

"The sheriff has the gold and a bad arm. Claimin' he only done his duty, he says the lookout spotted him and pumped two bullets into his left arm afore he can act. Then he gets ahold of the lookout's pearl-handled six-gun and puts a shot plumb through the lookout's head.

"The other four buckoes come ashootin', but the lawman drills 'em all in four seconds flat—two between the eyes and two in the heart.

"The leader of the posse tells the sheriff he can run for mayor. Then one of the citizens speaks up. The six out-laws is boothilled where they lay, and the posse conducts the sheriff back to town. Naturally, they hang him.

"I guess they reckoned he was either one of the gang or the lie he told was an insult to their brains. Either case was cause for the rope in them days."

"Stretched out dead as fish in a barrel is them outlaws."

HALEDJIAN KNEW
WHAT THE CITIZEN SAID.
DO YOU?

"You can't get seven bullets out of a six-gun."
Remember — the lookout fired two, and the sheriff then killed each of the five outlaws.

Simplest Reducing Plan Yet: Take Off Into Space

By DELVINA WHEELDON
(Written for NEA Service)

CINCINNATI, Ohio —(NEA)— A free-floating female, that's me. What many women aspire to, losing a little weight, I went all the way with—into weightlessness itself.

It was done at the Wright Air Development Center near Dayton, Ohio, where the aeromedical laboratory doctors, technicians, and specialists are studying the effects of space on man.

The human body, geared for one kind of environment, is being tested there in a series of experiments to accustom it to another environment, many parts of which are known to be hostile.

At the Wright center, one can be made weightless, frictionless, can be made to suffer from buffeting, high heat ranges, isolated silence, ear-piercing sounds, and take many times the normal pull of gravity.

I tried, or sampled, them all as one of the unofficial "guinea pigs."

Maybe because women worry so much about increasing pounds the phenomenon of weightlessness intrigued me most.

At Wright, they have a specially rigged transport plane. The entire rear area is padded; floor, sides and ceiling. The principle used is to first dive the plane into a steep angle, losing about 2,000 feet, then pull up into a gentle, outside loop. They call it a "parabolic arc."

Those who are going to be weightless start by lying prone at the extreme rear of the plane. When the aircraft goes into the first stages of the arc you push off gently. Then, surprisingly, out you go in space within the capsule of the fuselage.

All motions of the individual become exaggerated. A snap of the fingers will put you into a roll. You can have the impression of being a circus gymnast, turning easily over and over in a succession of backflips.

Above all, I learned not to push off too hard. On one of the 24 times I went through the exercise, I found myself going the full length of the plane zooming in great style—"Look, Ma, no hands"—in a power glide! My longest period of weightlessness was 21 seconds.

The important thing these tests teach the potential space man is that he must relearn normal jobs.

When I tried to put a screwdriver to a screwhead, I was bounced away every time I applied pressure.

All I can say is that if they have time-and-a-half for repair work in outer space, everyone will get rich. It takes so long to do some of the simplest things. First off, the repairmen will have to get hooked to whatever he's working on, or he might bounce away and float alongside the job, unable to get back at it.

Of course, there's another way to look at it. He can drop any one of his tools and it'll stay right there. Some ways space is pretty handy.

Author Delvina Wheeldon floats weightless in the air inside a special test plane at Wright Air Development Center. Second woman to experience weightlessness in the U.S., she's a broadcaster and lecturer specializing in air and space subjects

There were no electrodes hooked to me, but I could detect no vital changes other than being a little tired which was natural for the excitement of something new to me.

My real reason for wanting to sample some of the trappings of space is common to most women, I think. Everywhere we read about projects for "MAN in space," "MANNED space capsule," and "MANNED space stations."

After my experience I asked a couple of the aeromedical laboratory specialists about the chances of women in space. One of them looked very thoughtful, as scientist types should in considering all sides of a question.

"I think outer space without women," he said, "would be much less interesting than it could be."

Diplomatic answer? Well maybe. Scientific conclusion? Certainly. Logical? Absolutely.

Hold Special Council Meet To Read Ordinance

PITTSFIELD — An adjourned meeting of the Pittsfield City Council from Tuesday evening to Thursday was held for the ordinance for the bond election to be read for the first time. It was prepared by the Allan Blair Co. of Chicago and did not arrive in time for the Tuesday meeting. It was read on Thursday for the first reading and approved and will receive the second reading at the next meeting.

This calls for $458,000 in bonds in $1,000 denominations to be paid off over a period of 16 years. The bonds were approved by bond investors, Chapman and Cutler, investors in this field.

The election is to be held on Aug. 21, and the judges were named for the four wards. Mayor Frank Penstone said there will be full explanations made to the public from now until election time telling about the bonds, etc. All All receipts from the city sales tax have been applied to this lake fund at this time.

HOMEMAKERS HOLD ACHIEVEMENT DAY AT JULY 21 MEETING

The July 21st meeting of the Thrifty Homemakers 4-H Club was the annual Achievement Day program. The meeting opened with the Battle Hymn of the Republic and the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting. Roll call was answered by what one liked at 4-H camp.

Demonstrations included "Making Cake and Ice Cream" by Carrea Wood and "Making a Skirt," Frances Watson.

Refreshments of punch and cookies were served by the Home Bureau Unit to members and guests.

Shouldering Into Style

LONGER JACKETS FOR SUITS

Fall suits have easy lines and longer jackets this year. Some jackets are straight and buttonless; others are intended to be worn closed. Sapphire British tweed collarless jacket suit (left) has matching blouse in silk crepe. This is a Davidow design. Ensemble with suit look (right) is by Ben Zuckerman in putty-colored wool. Jacket with notched collar and button front is worn over short-sleeved dress.

BY GAILE DUGAS

NEW YORK — (NEA) — The longer jacket length is the single most impressive thing about new suits for autumn.

Cutaway or straight, the jacket length is wristbone now. Jacket silhouette is still easy even though it's buttoned and not many nip in at the waist in the manner of the old-time tailleur.

Generally, there's the buttoned jacket, the jacket with no buttons in the Chanel manner and the jacket which is cutaway or rounded at the front.

The buttoned jacket is the one that shows the most shaping at the waistline. But this is an easy shaping which gently suggests the body curves.

Shoulders have been broadened by seaming, not padding, and sleeves slightly widened to provide proper balance for the wider shoulder.

Fur trim, as for coats, is widely used. It appears as a deep collar, an ascot or even a jacket lining. Some suits convey a feeling of elegance via mink gill linings.

Though snowy mink makes a stunning collar for an inky black dinner suit, brown is a color that many American fashion houses like as an alternative. Deep, lustrous browns are handled in exactly the same way that black is used. Pewter gray, oxford and dashing mixtures of dark blue or black-and-white are all used for the new fall suits.

Suit skirts are straight and narrow, for the most part, and are eased here and there with a pleat. While they are slightly longer, it's only about an inch and not enough to cause a fashion flurry.

Sherman And Rachel Adams' Neighbors Help Shield Them From Inquisitive Public

LINCOLN, N.H. (AP)—Sherman Adams, only a year ago the center of Washington's biggest political storm, today awaits the end of the Eisenhower administration in deliberate seclusion here where he first entered politics.

Adams and his wife Rachel have firmly shut their doors on the world beyond the high White Mountains, and the townsfolk have closed ranks protectively to shield them.

"Before it happened," said one resident, "you used to be able to get up a good argument on Sherm Adams. No more. Everybody is for him. It's just—well, it's just—loyalty, I suppose. And he was always good to us."

"It" is the way the neighbors refer to the sequence of events in the Goldfine case that led to Adams' resignation under fire last September as assistant to the President, a position which made him one of the most powerful men in the nation.

But mostly these taciturn Yankees won't talk about the Adamses at all. They just look with hard, wary eyes at strangers who ask questions.

Townspeople are reluctant to even point out the Adams house. One woman finally agreed to, with the proviso the reporter promise to drive right past without slowing down or snapping a picture of it.

This is the way of the people, known for their close - mouthed traits, and Adams has been among them a long time. To this little papermill town, contained on three sides by the White Mountain National Forest, he brought his bride 36 years ago. Here he entered politics and rose to state legislator, congressman, governor.

In his Washington days, Adams was the despair of newsmen with his brusque manner and his frugality with words. He never held news conferences, not even to defend himself. He just read a prepared statement to reporters and allowed no questions.

Since returning to Lincoln, his taciturnity has become even more rigid.

"We will not be interviewed," was the word Mrs. Adams sent me through a friend. "We are people living our private lives and we insist on maintaining our privacy."

In the eight months since Adams deliberately dropped from public view, the couple has settled quietly into the life of a town where privacy is respected and admired.

Twice a day the blue station wagon with the distinctively low license plate—New Hampshire 22—rolls down Church Street toward the post office. In the morning, Mrs. Adams is usually at the wheel. She may exchange a few greetings with the neighbors or pick up a few necessities at the general store, but the visit is brief. Most of the shopping is done in Plymouth, 25 miles south or Littletown, the same distance north.

In the afternoon, Adams himself takes the mail to the post office, an easily identifiable figure in a black and white woolen tam o'shanter, his favorite headgear.

His stay is even briefer, and beyond that he is seldom seen. On rare occasions he may dine with his wife and friends at the 75-room Lincoln Hotel or visit a few oldtimers for a session of cribbage.

His public appearances are few. The most recent was May 24th when he spoke at the 50th anniversary of the Protestant Union church and honored old friend Bertha Matthews, the church organist.

The Adams house, a three-story colonial, stands at the foot of Little Coolidge Mountain, on a quiet street just off the paved road that leads to busy Route 3. Its front windows look out on the evergreen covered slopes of Loon Mountain and the soaring peaks beyond.

He is hard at work on his memoirs of the Eisenhower administration. They will not be published until after the 1960 presidential elections, by which time they will be useless as campaign fodder. A Boston newspaper reported $100,000 was involved in the book and magazine rights. Adams' reply was characteristic: "I will have no comment on any story."

Why So Much Talk Of Government Saving And Such Little Evidence Of It?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nowhere else in the world is there so much talk about economy in government.

Republicans and Democrats put in many a glorious day in the oratorical salt mines bragging over who does the better job at saving our money.

But rarely has talk been more ineffective.

The President not only has been unable to keep down the federal budget; he also has had trouble holding down White House expenses.

The White House probably offers, in terms we all can understand, the best illustration of governmental growth and expansion.

Abigail Adams, the first first lady to live there, complained bitterly: "We have not the least fence, yard or other convenience without, and the great unfinished audience-room I make a drawing room of to hang up the clothes in."

Because of lack of conveniences, she said, the place required about 30 persons to keep it going.

But as conveniences increased, so did the staff. The White House now has 72 employes, including 12 gardeners and six cooks.

Nationally, the expansion has been even greater. On March 4, 1933, the federal government was spending around 4½ billions a year. That was when Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va), one of the congressmen who have built their careers around the theory that what this government needs is less costly government, hit town. Now 26 years and innumerable economy speeches later, Byrd can survey glumly a federal budget of 77 billions.

So it's appropriate that we now have what almost seems to be a monument to the difficulties of saving money in government.

It's the new Senate Office Building, which stands on Capitol Hill, in the path of a steady economy wind whipping in from the Senate and House. Despite all this vocal help, the building has been described by senators themselves as being embarrassingly wasteful and extravagant.

Why do we hear so much talk of savings and so few evidences that anyone is listening?

The savingest congressman faces these problems:

The government, like the individual, is caught up in the inflationary spiral.

It must meet its huge civilian employe payroll, 2,337,495 at last count.

It must fight the cold war, with its fantastic weapons and costs.

(Did you ever stop to think that with the money spent to launch a couple of monkeys into space, George Washington could have fed and clothed his entire army at Valley Forge?)

Then, too, the government plays an expanding role in our lives, with inevitable expanding expenditures.

Both parties now say it is the government's business what happens to people on their farms, in their sickrooms, in their jobs or laid off their jobs, in their ventures into the stock market, in their retirement.

So a congressman from a farm state may be hellbent for economy, but argue the desperate need for higher crop supports.

Another from a coal mining area may work for higher unemployment benefits.

Another factor, rarely mentioned is that the government is so vast, its programs so complex, that anyone who sets out to whack the budget must soon feel like a man trying to cut down a lush tropical forest with a dull pocket knife. It grows faster than he can cut.

But it's the Senate Office Building that offers the best economy lesson.

Here is a building put up by men who repeatedly criticize the executive departments for wasting taxpayers' money, whose daily text is, "let us save."

Well, you've read the stories. How special rubber tile was ordered so that no carpets would be needed. How someone decided the tile was too slippery and so carpets were ordered to put over the title. How this meant the massive doors would not close and their bottoms had to be sawed off.

How the microphones didn't work. How the elevator service stalled. How the tunnel in which the little senatorial trains were to run wound up going nowhere. How some senators had their new offices remodeled before they moved in.

PINEAPPLES APLENTY

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii's pineapple industry squeezed a record amount of juice out of its crop for the year ending May 31, 1959.

It reports a total of 38,396,300 cases of pineapple juice, well above the 27 million cases reported for the previous year.

Owen Blanchard could see Diane Paige in the moonlight as she descended the steps down the cliff. For a momen, he waited, with the rock poised until she was in a spot beneath him.

So intent was he on what he was doing that he heard no sound behind him. Then, just as he was about to release the rock, a metal rod was suddenly pressed firmly against the small of his back.

It almost caused him to drop the rock, but not quite, for the voice that came from behind him made him grasp it more firmly.

It was the voice of Casey Paige.

"Don't let that rock go, Mr. Blanchard."

Blanchard stood like a statue. "What do you mean?" he said, trying to keep his voice down. The rock in his hand reflected the beam of a flashlight.

"If you let it fall, you'll go over the edge of the cliff after it." Casey's voice was soft, but there was a deadly meaning behind it.

The rod pressed more firmly into the middle of Blanchard's back for emphasis.

Blanchard turned and let the rock fall from his hands to the ground at his feet. He faced Casey.

Constable Maynor's flashlight blinded him.

"Darling," he called. "Diane! Come back. I'm up here."

He heard her cry of surprise and joy and he was waiting with both arms outstretched to help her up, and then enfold her tenderly.

• • •

Later, Casey carried Erna in those same arms, with Diane beside him and they returned to the cottage where Diane put the child to bed. The doctor would arrive soon, but Erna was no longer feverish and was showing signs of awakening.

"The constable was waiting for me when I returned from Boston," Casey said. "He flagged me down and told me what happened. We got here as fast as we could and when you weren't at the cottage, we guessed what you were up to. We climbed the cliff stairway and we found the aluminum rod sticking out of Libby's grave. About that time, Owen Blanchard came out of the house to wait for you."

"Be generous with him," Diane said.

"After he was about to kill you?"

"I'm sure he was desperate. I know how that feels, what it does to you. He's an old man and he's had a great deal of sorrow. I hated him, Casey, but that isn't good. It's not good to hate anyone. Do what you can for him."

"Yes," he said. "I'll do whatever I can. What about the little girl?"

• • •

She walked over to him and put her arms around his neck and looked up at him earnestly.

"Casey, is there any way we can bring her up? Adopt her, I mean?"

Casey kissed her.

"With Owen Blanchard's permission we could," he said. "He's her nearest of kin and therefore her legal guardian. Only kin, as far as we know. I have a subtle hunch that he wouldn't object. He was just a mistaken old man, who loved his son too much and got over his head into trouble. But Blanchard is genuinely sorry about the whole thing and he wants what's best for the little girl. Things happened just about as you suspected, by the way. Perhaps Libby's body will be recovered one of these days."

Diane shook her head and moved back away from her husband. "Do you think I'd be good for the little girl, Casey? I know she'd be good for me."

• • •

He nodded. "Erna would have love and tenderness, all the understanding a child needs. She wouldn't be our own flesh and blood, but the difference would be very small. We'd love her as if she were."

"Please ask Mr. Blanchard. Beg him. . . ."

He drew her back to him with a broad grin.

"He already has asked us to take care of her. We didn't have to ask him. And when you went upstairs to get the child he did the begging."

She drew back. "Why didn't you tell me, Casey?"

"I wanted to hear you say you wanted her. I wanted you to be sure."

She took his hand, led him toward the bedroom.

"Did you ever watch a little child awaken?" she asked. "It's one of the most beautiful things in the world. Come on, I'll show you."

As they entered the bedroom, Erna began to stir, as if upon signal.

Women Are Still Second-Class Citizens In Areas Of Church Responsibility

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

Women today occupy a back seat in the running of American religious denominations.

Their roles are widely restricted. They do much of the work, but generally have little voice in policy. They're often called the "shadow church."

"By and large, women still are second - class citizens in the church," said Mrs. W. Murdoch MacLeod, executive director of the 12-million-member United Church Women.

"In most every other field, their equal rights have been recognized at least in principle. But in various instances, they're still excluded from important areas of church responsibility."

Technically, they've been gaining ground in several groups.

Yet even in cases where prohibitions against their participation in church or synagogue government have been removed, their representation often remains minimal.

Almost universally, local church boards, vestries or councils, as well as national law-making bodies are overwhelmingly male. In many religious groups, women specifically are barred from such governing bodies.

"There is no uestion about it, the church is behind the times," said Mrs. Arthur Sherman, executive director of the Episcopal Church's General Division of Women's Work. "There have been gains but they are small."

Numerous denominations recently have revised laws to accredit women legislators. But in others it's still an issue, 40 years after the United States removed the sex bar to the franchise.

The question boiled to the surface this year in several church arenas, and in one case, a Lutheran pastor was suspended partly because he let women in his congregation vote.

The Wisconsin Lutheran Synod took the action against the Rev. Richard Buege, pastor of two churches in Arcadia and Whitehall, Wis., but both congregations voted to quit the organization and keep their pastor.

In a similar vein, the male trennial convention of the two-million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod rebuffed a proposal to change its rule denying women a vote in the congregational affairs.

The Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (Southern) also turned down an effort to admit women delegates to the church's General Assembly, its chief governing body. Women also are barred as local church officers.

They also are similarly restricted in the Reformed Church in America.

Belted Overcoat Pet Of Italian Fashions

By SUE CARDOZO

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) —The big belted overcoat is the pet of Italian fashion collections for the coming fall and winter.

The eight days of showings in Rome and Florence ended Thursday night. The couturiers joined in a buckle up, muffle up refrain.

Heavy muted tweeds were fashioned into a cape-back silhouette, bulky and round-shouldered, with deep low-set sleeves baring the wrists.

The Italian collections on the whole were sedate, tailored and cautious. Their frivolity was restricted to fur trimmings, chunky necklaces and an occasional flounce.

Emilio Schuberth was an exception. As usual, he added frills at every opportunity.

Dark colors and conservative fabrics dominated daytime clothes. But lame (pronounced lah-may), embossed satin and encrusted lace ran riot at night.

Suits and dresses generally were straight and slim, with hemlines below the knees. Tunic tops came back, both fitted and loose. Suit jackets tended to hug the hips.

The waistline wandered slightly, mostly south. Hemlines frequently were doubled by the prevalent use of redingotes, middies and coats slightly shorter than the skirts beneath.

The collections of two designers under 30 were outstanding.

Roberto Capucci showed voluminous evening coats and trim tunic suits. Patrick de Barentzen, Fath-trained Frenchman showing for the second time in Rome, scored with low-slung trench coats and imaginative detail.

Other highlights of the Italian pageant of style were Irene Galitzine's Trompe l'Oeil suits, Fabiani's girded tweed ponchos, and the knitted silks seen among the Florence boutique offerings.

SEVERE CRITIC

NEW YORK (AP) — To pianist-composer Linda Babits, winning musical contests for her "Palisades Park Suite" is regular fare. In the last year she has won three major prizes—the John Golden Award, Salt Lake Philharmonic Competitions and the Palisades Composition Award—worth a total of $2,000.

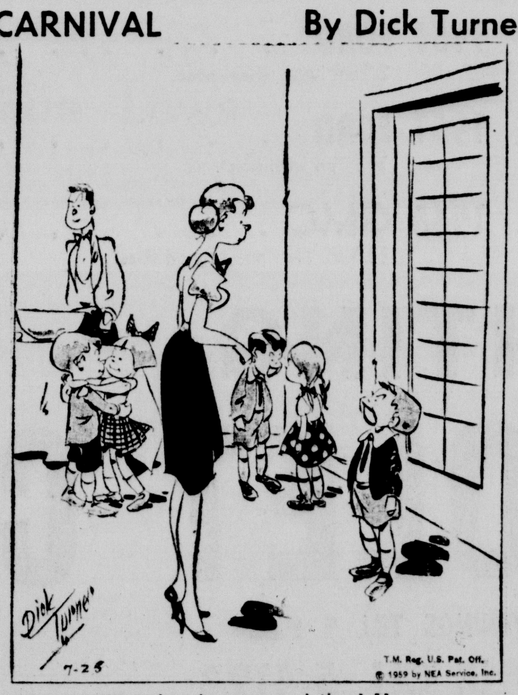

Linda says there's no secret about her writing, she just has an effective listener in 8-year-old sister Olivia. Says Linda: "I play the piece for Olivia. If she doesn't squirm, stretch, read, drite, color, draw, get hungry or thirsty or fall asleep, I know the piece is right."

SANDMAN'S PROBLEM

NEWFANE, N.Y. (AP)—Firecrackers are effective in keeping starlings and crows away from a cherry crop, sheriff's deputies said, but they also keep the sandman away.

The deputies asked a cherry grower to place the firecrackers farther from the home of a neighbor after the man complained that he couldn't sleep.
